Next Year's Wheat Crop May Break All Records

Bumper Production Of 1,200,000,000 Bushels Indicated By Early Estimate

By the United Press

Another huge wheat crop is in the making and it may be a record-breaker.

Farmers are planting 80 million acres of wheat next year, about 10 per cent more than the Government suggested, the Department of Agriculture said yesterday in its quarterly report on the wheat situation.

The first official forecast will be issued December 20.

The report calculated the 1949 crop on the basis of a 15-bushel-an-acre average yield and came up with a 1,200,000,000 bushel total. That would provide 500 million bushels more than the Nation needs for its own use.

18-Bushel Average

If the yield averages 18 bushels an acre, as it did this year, there will be a record harvest of more than 1,400,000,000 bushels. The previous record of 1,365,000,000 bushels was set in 1947.

United States exports of 480 million bushels in the 1947-48 season were the largest ever shipped out by any country in a single year.

But with world food conditions improving, the United States can count on exporting only about 300 million to 400 million bushels of its surplus in 1949-50, the report said. So stocks on hand may continue to pile up.

By July 1, 1949, stocks will have reached about 300 million bushels. By the following year they could be between 400 million and 500 million bushels, the report said. That would be about double the prewar average. The all-time peak of 631 million bushels was reached in 1942.

Support Price Is $2

The Government is now supporting the price of wheat at $2 a bushel to the farmer.

The report took note of a post-war trend toward government-to-government sales at fixed prices. Of the 450 million bushels of wheat that moved in trade last season from countries other than the United States, 78 per cent was sold under such arrangements. Countries sponsoring this type of trading include Canada, Australia, Argentina and Russia.

If the trend continues, the report said, the United States could find itself playing second fiddle as a grain supplier in many world markets.

Fuller Knowledge Of Russia Urged By Carnegie Group

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Carnegie Corp. of New York today recommended increased knowledge and understanding of the Russians—whether this country lives with them in peace or in war.

The recommendation was made in the thirty-seventh annual report of the corporation, one of the Nation's largest foundations.

The report said:

"Whether we are to live in peace with Russia, as we profoundly hope, or in strife, it is of utmost importance that we achieve systematic and full understanding of Russian culture and history, and of the habits, beliefs, motivations, fears and loyalties of the Russian people.

"Without such understanding, our best efforts to create a stable world or to defend our own freedom will be futile."

The corporation uses its income—listed as $5,700,190 in the past year—for the "advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States and of the British dominions and colonies."

Another Disaster

6000 Perish As Blast Sinks Chinese Ship

Shanghai, Dec. 5 (AP).—Two Chinese ship explosions one month apart were estimated today to have taken possibly 9200 lives.

Explosion of the crowded refugee steamer Kiangya near Shanghai Friday night with loss of an estimated 3200 or more lives, brought the disclosure from official Nanking sources that as many as 6000 died in a similar sinking off southern Manchuria early in November.

This larger disaster, rating as probably the greatest single-ship tragedy of modern times, was said to have involved an unidentified merchant ship which was evacuating elements of the government's Fifty-second Army from Yingkow.

It was not announced by the military, but the sources said word trickled into Nanking that the boiler burst, setting off ammunition and killing all on board.

The Yingkow evacuation fleet was under Communist artillery fire at the time, but it was not known whether this had anything to do with the explosion.

Belief grew in maritime circles that a drifting World War II mine sank the refugee ship Kiangya in the Yangtze estuary Friday night. Earlier rumors had blamed Communist sabotage.

C-54 Carrying 37 Servicemen Is Lost at Sea

Honolulu, Dec. 5 (AP).—A C-54 Air Force carrier with 37 men aboard went down in the Pacific 1000 miles southwest of Honolulu shortly before dawn today.

The Pacific Air Command reported the plane belonged to the 374th Troop Carrier Squadron. It was one of five ferrying 135 ground personnel of the Ninety-eighth Bomb Group from Okinawa to Spokane, Wash.

Three other troop carriers landed their passengers at Johnston Island, 715 miles southwest of Honolulu, and joined the search for the lost plane.

The fourth carrier, alerted en route to Johnston, searched the route vainly before putting in to that tiny sandspit refueling base.

The Ninety-eighth Bomb Group personnel were returning to their base after a three-month special training period on Okinawa.

The Air Command reported the plane was "ditched" in the sea at 5:06 a. m. (10:06 a. m., EST) shortly after radioing that two engines had failed.

The plane sent an emergency position report, but air officers said such an estimate could err as much as 50 miles because of overcast conditions.

Three Navy ships, including the escort aircraft carrier Rendova, were within 400 miles of the position. They were ordered to head for the spot.

Grid Champions In Bus Accident; One Player Killed

Grants Pass, Oreg., Dec 5 (U.P.).—A bus carrying the Grants Pass State High School football champions home after the "big game," crashed out of control tonight and broke into flames.

One player was killed and another reported missing.

The rest of the 30-man squad climbed out through the windows, escaping with minor cuts and bruises.

The Grants Pass team was 5 miles from a homecoming welcome that was canceled by the mishap. They won the State title, 6 to 0, in Portland Saturday.

China Shifts Tried Troops To Nanking

60,000 to Replace Units in Defense Area Considered Politically Unstable

Nanking, Dec. 5 (AP).—About 60,000 government troops from the Hankow command were reported today moving into the Nanking and Pengpu defense area to replace units considered politically or militarily unstable. The report came from a usually reliable Chinese Nationalist source.

With the Communists also maneuvering into new positions, fighting reports were meager from the battle zone stretching north nearly 100 miles between Pengpu and Suchow.

Reports from three government army groups formerly based at Suchow said they were making "unsatisfactory slow" progress in their effort to fight southward. Their position, previously mentioned as 30 to 40 miles south of Suchow, was not stated.

One Group Surrounded

The mission of these three army groups is to free the government's Twelfth Army Group, tightly surrounded for nine days by Communists about 130 miles northwest of Nanking.

Substantial reinforcement of the front 100 miles northwest of Nanking depends on ability of the 100,000 men of the Twelfth to get clear and fall back on the Hwai River line before Pengpu. It is held by the government's Sixth and Eighth Army groups, totaling about 80,000 men. Neither group is highly regarded.

Foreign military observers believe the Communists could crash through the Hwai River line without serious difficulty.

Instead, Communist Gen. Chen Yi is reported to have temporarily abandoned that front to move 125,000 men north to confront the three government groups coming out of Suchow.

Breather for Government

Thus given a breather, the government was reported replacing some of the Hwai River troops with elements of the Fourteenth Army group.

This new group is estimated to number 60,000 men, at the most. About 35,000 of these are earmarked for the defense of Nanking itself.

Reports from north China gave the impression the Communists were stepping up their pressure on Kalgan, 100 miles northwest of Peiping.

Peiping reports said refugee railway workers from Communist-conquered Manchuria declared the Mukden-Changchun, Mukden-Yingkow and Mukden-Antung lines had been restored.

Atomic Detection Of Cancer Seen Within 5 Years

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (AP).—Within five years atomic energy probably will give medical science an unerring method of detecting hidden cancer, Dr. Paul C. Aebersold, the Government's No. 1 isotope man, said tonight.

It even may be possible, he added, to determine whether an individual is going to have cancer in the near future.

These things are likely, Dr. Aebersold said, because isotopes, the "hot atoms," are being used increasingly in research which draws nearer and nearer to the basic secrets of living matter.

Researchers, he said, have been able to detect even the tiniest hidden cancer in mice by feeding radio-active carbon and tracing it through the mouse system of nutrition.

Bramuglia To Fly Here For Talks

Argentine Minister Invited by Truman, Marshall; Will Hold Political Discussion

Rome, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Argentine Foreign Minister Juan A. Bramuglia announced tonight that he has accepted a formal invitation to visit the United States for what official Argentine sources said would be political talks with President Truman and Secretary of State George C. Marshall.

These sources said Bramuglia will leave Rome Tuesday for New York.

Bramuglia's announcement said: "On my return to Buenos Aires I have been invited by the Government of the United States to visit that country. I have accepted that invitation, following instructions of President Peron, which I shall obey faithfully and fully.

"I shall take advantage of my brief visit to discuss matters of policy affecting both peoples. Although the invitation was extended as a mere courtesy, designed to strengthen the friendly relations of our two peoples, it also provides an opportunity for me to obtain information on general questions of interest to Argentina."

Official Argentine sources said the Washington talks will deal exclusively with political questions. Not even economic problems will be discussed, these sources said. They added that European problems and the Berlin blockade will not be touched upon.

Bramuglia was president of the United Nations Security Council during November when the Berlin case was aired and, taking the lead, worked hard with the other "neutral" council members to effect a compromise in the east-west dispute.

Gallegos, in Cuba, Lays Revolt to Exploiters

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 5 (AP).—Romulo Gallegos, ousted president of Venezuela, said today Venezuelan reactionaries, foreign capital and oil interests caused the recent military coup in Caracas.

He arrived in Cuba as a political exile. In an interview he declared "powerful forces of Venezuelan capital, lacking in social awareness, and also those of foreign capital, exploiters of the wealth of our soil," created the background for the bloodless revolt.

Gallegos was overthrown by the army on November 24 and a military junta took over the government. The junta held Gallegos prisoner but announced his departure early today.

The novelist-president insists he still is his country's legal president.

His arrival in Cuba was unexpected. He said he intends to visit the United States.

One reason for the coup, he said, was a new tax on the oil industry, by which the oilmen would have to pay 50 per cent of their earned income to the government. Gallegos declined to name the nationality of the foreign capitalists accused.

Gallegos did say, however, that the Venezuelan group which overthrew him had been influenced by the recent military revolt in Peru.

Secrecy Put Up to Welles

Lovett and Sayre Face Call To Testify in Spy Ring Case

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SPEEDS BACK—Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), of the House Un-American Activities Committee is shown leaping from a Coast Guard plane to a crash boat to go ashore at Miami. He was flown to Washington by Navy plane.

By the United Press

A member of the House Un-American Activities Committee said last night Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett may be "called" to testify at hearings on secret documents stolen from the State, War and Navy Departments 10 years ago.

Representative Richard M. Nixon, (R., Calif), announced the committee will subpena Francis B. Sayre, a former Assistant Secretary of State. The material allegedly was given to Whittaker Chambers, an admitted former Communist, by an unidentified member of a prewar Communist spy ring.

Nixon added he will recommend the committee invite Lovett to testify and force his appearance by a subpena should he refuse.

House investigators last night asked Sumner Welles, onetime Undersecretary of State, whether they should publish or suppress microfilmed secrets seized from Whittaker Chambers. What Welles told them was not disclosed.

Welles was Undersecretary at the time the documents allegedly were "stolen."

Nixon added that he also will suggest that the committee "invite" Sumner Welles to discuss the case.

Nixon said the committee is particularly interested in getting Sayre's views. A "considerable amount of the microfilmed material came out of Sayre's office," he said.

House Red spy investigators yesterday turned to a former high State Department official to determine if new evidence in their hands can be made public without endangering the national security.

This evidence consists of documents and microfilms of documents turned over to them by a self-described former Red courier who broke with the Communist Party in 1938. The documents, all apparently from State Department files, were said never to have reached Russian hands.

While the former State Department official was being consulted, members of the House Un-American Activities Committee began moving on Washington for a reopening of their Soviet spy hearings Tuesday at 2 p. m. One member, Representative Nixon (R., Calif.,) was transferred at sea yesterday form the steamship Panama to a Coast Guard flying boat which flew him to Miami. From there he was flown to Washington in a Navy airplane arriving at 9:25 p. m.

The former Red courier, Whittaker Chambers, now a senior editor of Time magazine, has been subpenaed to appear at the committee's session Tuesday. In addition, at least five other witnesses have been called, including photographic and handwriting experts. A committee spokesman has indicated that handwriting on some of the documents points directly to a former State Department employe as Chambers' probable contact within the department.

There was some likelihood that the committee might direct an investigation to determine whether the theft of secret papers revealed by Chambers links up with the 1945 "Amerasia case," which involved the leak of many Navy and State Department documents. Two persons were fined on a charge of conspiracy to remove Government records and files.

In some quarters the new phase of the investigation is expected not only to rival the Canadian spy ring exposure, but possibly to provide a long-sought direct link between United States and Canadian espionage activities. Both, it was pointed out, deal with secret docu-

Allies Call Upon Soviet Union To Disown 'Illegal' Rump Government

By William J. Humphreys

Paris, Dec. 5 (NYHT).—The Western Powers called on the Soviet Union tonight to disown the "illegal" city government it has just recognized in Berlin. Constitution of the rump Communist administration had created "new and grave problems" standing in the way of a German settlement, it was said.

This proposal for a Soviet reversal and the warning that East-West differences had increased were contained in a 2000-word memorandum by the United States, Britain and France. It accused the Soviet Union of concerted action to "bring about piecemeal (and finally a total) division of the city."

Currency Is Bottleneck

The document was prepared as information for the special committee that is to draft a single currency plan for Berlin. The currency question is recognized as the technical, diplomatic bottleneck behind which the Berlin blockade and other East-West conflicts are jammed. The special committee was named by the six "neutrals" of the United Nations' Security Council.

The joint statement unfolded a list of 51 examples of Soviet interference with the Berlin civilian administration—all "progressively tended to split it in two."

Latest of these actions was the "carefully stage-managed" agitation for the new rump government in the Soviet sector, an action which made "the establishment of a single currency extremely difficult." In fact, continued existence of the "illegal" government would "end all possibility of the legal, unified administration functioning on a city-wide basis."

Council President Ignored

This action has been taken, the memorandum went on, despite the "expressed wish of the president of the Security Council that any steps should be avoided which would lead to a complication of the Berlin crisis."

The municipal elections held today in the western sectors of Berlin were in accordance with the conditions laid down by the duly constituted City Assembly, it was stated. But the Soviet command, although it previously had agreed to the necessity of democratic elections for all Berlin, had imposed preliminary conditions inacceptable to the municipal assembly.

This move—which the memorandum denounced as unwarranted interference—then gave the Soviet command an excuse to forbid the Soviet sector to participate in the elections.

"The Western Allies, on the contrary, regard the elections as a purely German matter," the joint statement explained.

"These developments pose new and grave problems for the solution of Berlin's currency difficulties," the memorandum said. "These new problems have arisen because of interference on the part of the Soviet authorities with the normal workings of the Berlin constitution."

The new problems, according to the memorandum "could even now be set aside if the Soviet authorities were to disown the unconstitutional body."

Social Democrats Take Early Lead As Overwhelming Majority Votes

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin (Monday), Dec. 6 (NYHT). — Berlin's Social Democrats, who have consistently been the most vociferous in the resistance to Soviet pressure here, this morning took an early and strong lead in the municipal election in which the overwhelming majority of west Berliners defiantly rejected Soviet-sponsored communism.

Communist threats of disruption fizzled into minor incidents yesterday and the voting was generally orderly. Seventy-one Communists were arrested in unsuccessful attempts to prevent free voting.

Because of the Communist boycott of the west sector elections, the real test hung on the size of the vote. And the turnout of nearly 85 per cent of the 1,500,000 eligible voters meant that virtually every non-Communist man and woman in West Berlin made his way yesterday through fog and rain to cast a ballot for City Assembly candidates.

Incomplete returns at 1:30 a. m. gave the Social Democrats nearly 1½ times as many votes as the two rival parties — the Liberal Democrats and Christian Democrats—put together.

With 345 polling places out of 1572 reporting, Social Democrats received 163,750 votes, the Christian Democrats and the Liberal Democrats 47,150.

The Communist defeat today was even greater than the one they suffered in the 1946 Berlin municipal elections. At that time, they averaged 12 per cent in the Western sectors. The three non-Communist parties in 1946 polled 78 per cent of the vote as compared with nearly 88 per cent today.

Yesterday West Sector transport workers staged a successful strike to outmaneuver the Russians who had ordered that West Ber-

Soviet Staff in U. S. Reduced Over 20% In Three Months

By the United Press

Soviet Russia has trimmed its official government staff in the United States by more than one-fifth during the past three months, it was disclosed yesterday.

Latest official figures show there were only 225 Soviet diplomats and aides in the United States on November 21, compared with 290 on August 1.

There was a peak total of 2300 in 1945, when the United States and Russia were wartime allies. Most of the officials here at that time were supervising shipment of billions of dollars' worth of United States Lend-Lease equipment to Russia.

Closing of Soviet consulates at San Francisco and New York City was responsible for about half the current personnel reduction.

The rest was due largely to the continued shrinkage in the number of officials here for the purpose of working out trade deals.

Trumans Return From Weekend Cruise to Norfolk

President Truman returned at midmorning yesterday from Norfolk, Va., after a weekend cruise aboard the presidential yacht Williamsburg.

The President, Mrs. Truman and their daughter Margaret stepped ashore at the Naval Gun Factory and motored across town at once to the Blair House, which they are occupying while the White House undergoes repairs.

At Norfolk, Mr. Truman took part in ceremonies aboard the battleship Missouri when the State of Missouri presented the famous warcraft a silver service. He made the entire trip by water.

'Ike' Sums Up Conclusions On Russia, Communism and Present Challenge to U. S.

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

Marshal Zhukov and I frequently discussed the campaigns of the war. Because of his special position for several years in the Red Army he had had a longer experience as a responsible leader in great battles than any other man of our time. It seems that he was habitually sent to whatever Russian sector appeared at the moment to be the decisive one. By his descriptions of the composition of the Russian Army, of the terrain over which it fought, and of his reasons for his strategic decisions, it was clear that he was an accomplished soldier.

The marshal was astonished when I told him that each of our divisions, with its reinforcing battalions, was maintained at a strength of 17,000. He said that he tried to maintain his divisions at about 8000, but that frequently, in a long campaign, some would be depleted to a strength of 3000 to 4000.

Highly illuminating to me was his description of the Russian method of attacking through mine fields. The German mine fields, covered by defensive fire, were tactical obstacles that caused us many casualties and delays.

Marshal Zhukov gave me a matter-of-fact statement of his practice, which was, roughly, "There are two kinds of mines; one is the personnel mine and the other is the vehicular mine. When we come to a mine field our infantry attacks exactly as if it were not there. The losses we get from personnel mines we consider only equal to those we would have gotten from machine guns and artillery if the Germans had chosen to defend that particular area with strong bodies of troops instead of with mine fields. The attacking infantry does not set off the vehicular mines, so after they have penetrated to the far side of the field they form a bridgehead, after which the engineers come up and dig out channels through which our vehicles can go."

I had a vivid picture of what would happen to any American or British commander if he pursued such tactics, and I had an even

Fatal Fall Ruled Out

Probers of Merchant's Death Turn Toward Robbery Theory

Charles Scheer, N. Capitol st. clothier who died mysteriously Saturday from a fractured skull, may have been struck by a robber, without knowing what happened to him, police and medical investigators said yesterday.

Scheer could have been attacked between 1:45 and 4:30 p. m. last Monday, then talked with customers, friends and relatives for 5½ hours while suffering from nausea but otherwise acting normally, before physicians examined and hospitalized him, it was asserted by probers.

Scheer was 48 and ran a small clothing store for men at 1100 N. Capitol st. for 15 years. He lived over the store until six years ago, when he moved with his wife, Edith, and son, Joel, now 18, to a modest suite at 1413 Saratoga ave. ne., Apartment 728-B.

If the fractured skull from which he died in George Washington University Hospital Saturday afternoon was inflicted by a robber in his store, the assailant stole nothing, or else so little that Scheer's wife, who helped run the store, has been unable to discover any cash or goods missing, pending a complete inventory.

Homicide Squad Detective Sergt. Richard J. Felber, who is investigating the case with Sergt. Harold C. Huffman, said yesterday:

"Scheer deposited $250 in receipts in his bank last Monday noon, and was all right then. He was all right when he talked to his wife by telephone at 1:45. We don't know what happened between then and 4:30, when Bernard James, 14, 1108 Half st. ct. nw., a newsboy, found him sitting in a chair in the front part of the store. He had been vomiting. He said he

Can't Finish Up in Paris

U. N. Assembly Special Session Planned in N. Y. for Early '49

Paris, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The United Nations Assembly, abandoning all hope of completing its work at the present session, moved tonight to hold an extraordinary meeting in New York early next year.

The steering committee recommended the plan by a vote of 9 to 2 and it is expected to be confirmed by the General Assembly Monday.

The New York session would take up, probably in February, all the business which the assembly has failed to finish. The steering committee defeated, 12 to 2, a surprise Russian-Polish motion to let unfinished work hang over until the next regular session in September.

The delegates planned to end the Paris session a week from tonight and the United States and Britain were in a hot dispute on what the Assembly should take up during its last week.

Britain wanted action on disposal of Italian colonies in North Africa, giving Britain trusteeship over Cyrenaica. The United States wanted top priority for the problem of Korea where American and Russian occupation forces have been feuding for three years.

Delegates are pessimistic that either Korea or Italy's colonies can be acted upon before this session ends.

The Assembly itself must debate the Political Committee resolution for setting up a Palestine Conciliation Commission, and there are some prospects it may not win the necessary two-thirds vote.

Consideration of Israel's application for membership and the convention on freedom of information probably will go over to the New York session.

Parleys to Start On Defense Pact

Russians Fear It

U. S. Power In Air Held Lone War Bar

By the United Press

Representative Melvin Price (D., Ill.) said yesterday that Russian fear of the "invincible and challenging might" of the United States Air Force is all that prevents another war.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military commander in Germany, apparently thinks so, too, he asserted.

Price is one of a group of members of the House Armed Services Committee who recently completed a tour of Germany, Austria, Italy, France and Spain.

In a statement yesterday he said 2,200,000 people are "imprisoned in the western sector of Berlin while their Russian jailers are spending every waking hour in devising new, overburdening torment."

"It is solely fear of the invincible and challenging might of the United States Air Force that keeps peace in the world today."

Price said his group had a conference with Clay during which Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) asked the general if he thought there was going to be a shooting war.

"The general as much as said 'no,'" Price said. Short then asked Clay why he made such an answer, and "substantially" Clay said:

Both Have Too Much Respect

"'I, myself, and the Russians have too much respect for the ability of the United States Air Force to anticipate such a finality as a shooting war.'"

Price said the Russians miscalculated the Air Force's ability when they planned the current Berlin blockade, and the people of Europe know it.

By The Associated Press

After prolonged delay, actual negotiations for a military alliance between North America and western Europe are due to start here this week.

At the same time diplomatic informants report that detailed spadework is now being done by military leaders here on the problem of mutual aid for the European countries.

There are no hard-and-fast figures on costs yet but some rough estimates of the assistance which Western European Union countries may need in military supplies the first year run as high as two billion to three billion dollars.

Unless there is some unexpected hitch in the Administration's plans, President Truman's foreign policy proposals to the next session of Congress will be largely concerned with those two issues—the North Atlantic defense pact and military aid to Europe—plus American policy on the Chinese situation.

In connection with China, the President and Mrs. Truman are expected to receive Madame Chiang Kai-shek early this week.

The way cleared for action on the military alliance when the British embassy received from London Friday a draft of proposals for the pact—what diplomats call a "working paper." The draft, representing in general the views of the British, French, Belgian, Netherlands and Luxembourg governments, was worked out in London over a period of several weeks.

The ambassador of the five Western European Union governments will use it as a basis of negotiation with the State Department and Canadian envoys.

This same group held "exploratory talks" here last summer and the European proposals—still secret—are believed to follow the main outlines of the North Atlantic security principles then worked out.

Broadly, this idea is that those countries and others in the Atlantic area would form a regional defense system and would regard an attack on any one as an attack on all.

ments stolen during the same general period.

The espionage inquiry, dormant since last summer, broke wide open again late last week when Chambers turned over to the committee a number of rolls of microfilm which had been secreted in a small pumpkin on his farm at Westminster, Md. This break occurred after he had produced other documents in response to a demand for some such evidence in a slander suit brought against him by Alger Hiss, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Named Alger Hiss

During hearings of the committee last August, Chambers testified that Hiss, formerly a State Department official, was a Communist Party member and supplied him with information in 1937 and 1938. Hiss denied this and charged Chambers with lying.

When Chambers repeated his charges during a radio broadcast, Hiss sued for $75,000 damages. Chambers produced some 50 documents in the course of preliminaries to court action on the suit and this led to a demand from the committee for all documents in his possession. Chambers then led Robert A. Stripling, committee investigator, to the spot behind his farmhouse where the microfilms, in metal containers, were hidden in a pumpkin.

Stripling yesterday described in somewhat greater detail the films which he had shown previously only in their metal cases. They are, he said, photographs of State Department papers dated during 1937 and 1938. He added that the documents had not been photographed in Washington but did not elaborate.

Called Into Consultation

No one representing the State Department has been in touch with the committee since existence of the new evidence was revealed, Stripling said, adding that the former official had been called into consultation on orders from the committee.

"I have been instructed by the committee," he said, "to be in a position to inform them, by people who are competent on that particular period, on the advisability of having some of the evidence introduced into the record.

"There is a grave question of the propriety of full disclosure of these documents. So I was directed by the chairman to be prepared to advise the committee on this point."

The committee investigator said "a couple of Navy men" examined some of the papers which bore comment on the material, Stripling said, beyond remarking that "apparently some one had been very careless."

Representative Nixon's dramatic end to his Panama vacation trip came after Committee Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), had written Defense Secretary Forrestal to "take every step possible" to get Nixon back. Nixon handled much of the detail for previous investigations into alleged prewar Soviet espionage here and is thoroughly familiar with the case.

According to press wire services, Nixon described the new turn in events as of "top importance" after being landed at Miami. He was quoted as saying: "For the first time we have documentary evidence; it is no longer just one man's word against another's"

Nixon was taken from the steamer by a Coast Guard air-sea rescue plane in a quiet cove off Aklins Island, south of Jamaica. This plane, from the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Coast Guard base, took him the 475 miles to Miami, where he boarded a Navy airplane for Washington.

"This hearing," Nixon said, "is by far the most important the Committee on Un-American Activities has conducted because of the nature of the evidence and the importance of the people involved. It will prove to the American people once and for all that where you have a Communist you have an espionage agent."

He added that the new hearings would determine "what evidence Chambers has and who gave it to him."

The parallel between the loss of State and Navy Department papers in the Chambers case and that brought to light in the "Amerasia" incident made the possibilities good that the committee may take a second look at the 1945 document thefts. On June 6, 1945, six persons were arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on charges of conspiring to violate espionage laws. In all, the FBI said, it recovered documents or copies of papers from the State, Navy and War Departments, the Office of Strategic Services, the Office of War Information and the Federal Communications Commission.

The data removed from confidential files, according to the FBI, was turned over to Philip Jacob Jaffe, coeditor of "Amerasia," which allegedly had printed articles using information from the documents. Arrested at the time were: Jaffe, John Stewart Service, then foreign service officer of the State Department; Lieut. Andrew Roth, formerly assigned to the Office of Naval Intelligence; Emanuel Sigurd Larson, a former specialist in the China division of the State Department; Kate Louise Mitchell, coeditor of "Amerasia," and Mark Julius Gayn, a writer.

Jaffe pleaded guilty on September 29, 1945, to conspiracy to remove Government records and files and was fined $2500, while Larsen pleaded nolo contendre and was fined $500 a short time later. Charges against the others were dropped.

The affair had repercussions in the House, which on April 18, 1946, ordered a full-dress investigation by the Judiciary Committee. Representative George A. Dondero (R., Mich.) told the House at that time that others in the State Department were under suspicion of wartime espionage. He contended that Government records showed more than 100 files containing top-secret material were stolen from various departments while the Nation was at war.

Vast Majority in West Berlin Defy Russians by Voting

liners employed in the Soviet sector go to work this election Sunday rather than vote.

By halting nearly all inter-city transport until 10 a. m., the trade union action gave the 200,000 voters time and excuse for balloting before they went to their jobs in the Soviet sector.

The Russians refused to recognize the legality of the election and ordered a boycott early this fall. As a result the city has been finally split. A rump and appointive city council will rule the Soviet sector and the new elected assembly will reign in the western sectors of the city.

Yesterday morning 14 Communists crossed into the American sector to distribute anti-election pamphlets and were immediately picked up by German police.

In the French sector some Communists turned up near the polls and tried to take down the names of voters. This infuriated the people who nabbed would-be spies immediately and turned them over to the police.

Communist Threats Defied

Berlin men and women, as they were interviewed going to the polls said repeatedly that by defying Communist threats they hoped to prove to the world that they had made this city a dependable lifeline in the East-West battle.

The Russians managed to furnish the comical climax of the election.

Friday night Russian guards standing in front of the Russian monument in the British sector fired at some figures climbing up to the flag on top of the Brandenburger Tor the gate which is a few hundred yards away from the monument. It turned out that the people approaching the flag were Russian officers who had been instructed to hoist up a new and better banner. It is reported that the guards who fired the shots were reprimanded.

The Reds yesterday played a last minute propaganda trick. They claimed that Gen. Lucius Clay, American military governor, in an interview with a British journalist, had declared himself ready to recognize the rump government set up in the Soviet sector.

General Clay has officially denied the statement, declaring that all he had said was that existence of two separate city governments did not necessarily rule out the possibility of the East and West reaching an agreement on a single currency for the city and the lifting of the blockade.

Three Americans Perish As Lift Plane Crashes

Berlin, Dec. 5 (AP).—An American airlift plane—a C-54—crashed just after takeoff this morning and all three crew members perished.

The plane loaded with 10 tons of supplies, went down two miles from Fassberg in the British zone.

Since the airlift began in June, 16 Americans, and 7 Britons have died in flying accidents.

U. S. Series E Bond Sales Near Record

By The Associated Press

Sales of series E, United States savings bonds, the former "war bond" and the most widely held security in America, are rising toward a new peacetime record.

Officials predicted yesterday that purchases of these bonds not only will exceed cash-ins this year, but will also top previous peacetime buying totals, hitting about $4,200,000,000 against 1947's $4,085,000,000.

They said that will mean a further increase in the amount of these bonds outstanding. Already the total is at a record high of over 32 billion dollars. The bonds are held by an estimated 75 to 80 million persons, more than half the total population.

Purchases of E bonds from January 1 through November 30 totaled more than $3,800,000,000. This topped this year's redemptions for that period by nearly 400 million dollars, and beat sales in the first 11 months of 1947 by about 200 million dollars.

While buying of these bonds has increased, redemptions have fallen off by about 100 million dollars, or 5 per cent in comparison with last year's first 11 months.

One of the most cheering things to the Treasury has been the fact that new sales of E bonds have outstripped redemptions for the last six months without a break.

The other two savings bonds, series F and G, are keeping pace with E bonds, promising a record peacetime performance in 1948 for the savings bond program as a whole.

Profits Tax, Wage Boosts Up for Airing

By the United Press

Proposals for an excess profits tax and fourth-round wage increases will get an airing before the Senate-House Economic Committee at hearings starting today.

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), chairman, said yesterday the hearings were called primarily to get all the facts on distribution of corporation profits in relation to new tax and anti-inflation bills. But he expects labor's mounting demand for another wage hike, the fourth since the war, to get attention.

Both business and labor leaders will testify. Appearing for the CIO will be Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, who has already sounded a fourth-round wage rise warning, and Stanley H. Ruttenberg, director of the CIO research department. Nelson Cruickshank, director of the AFL's social insurance activities, will testify for the AFL.

Industry witnesses will include John Ballantyne, president of Philco Corp.; Clarence Francis, president of General Foods Corp.; Moses Pendleton, president of American Woolen Mills, and representatives of the Chase National Bank of New York, General Motors, Sun Oil, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Armour, General Electric and United States Steel.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said he believed the hearings will result in additional support for his proposal to put an excess profits tax back on large corporations.

He is a member of the subcommittee and is slated to become chairman of the full committee when Democrats take over control of Congress on January 3.

Steel Production Hits Record High During Past Week

Cleveland, Dec. 5 (AP).—Steelmaking production was lifted last week to the "highest level ever attained in war or peace," the magazine, Steel, said today.

"The equivalent of 1,804,300 net tons of ingots and castings were produced, passing the previous all-time high of 1,791,700 tons made during the week of November 13," the magazine said.

No major price changes were reported in the steel markets, however, Steel reported.

Steel predicted substantial carryovers on mill tonnage into the first quarter for 1949.

Work to Resume In West's Ports

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (AP).—Work will be resumed in all West Coast ports at 8 a. m. Monday, ending the 97-day-old waterfront tie-up, a maritime employer announcement said tonight.

The joint announcement of the Pacific American Shipowners Association and the Waterfront Employers Association here said work would be resumed "everywhere possible," depending only upon "the extent of readiness of men and ships."

By the United Press

Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) said yesterday the Senate Appropriations Committee, which he will head in the new Congress, will turn a cold eye on all forms of spending, including the military budget.

But he would not predict whether military appropriations would be held to the 15-billion-dollar limit President Truman advocates, or possibly trimmed below that.

He also said he was able and willing to serve as both Appropriations chairman and President Pro Tempore of the Senate if the party wants him.

The 79-year-old Tennesseean, who appeared rested and in good spirits, emphasized in an interview that he "never felt better" in his life.

McKellar is a sure bet to head the Senate spending committee. But there has been speculation he might decline, or not seek, the pro tempore post he held in 1945 and 1946. But he stated that "if the Democrats should see fit to elect me President Pro Tempore, I'll be glad to serve."

He said the Appropriations Committee would try to cut out any waste it found in Army and Navy spending, "or anywhere else."

Keyserling Hopeful U. S. Can Avoid Depression

By The Associated Press

Leon H. Keyserling, vice chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said last night the Nation "has a splendid chance" of avoiding a depression "in 1949 or any other year."

He said the country can absorb a proposed 15 billion dollar military budget without curtailing other essential services.

Keyserling, interviewed over radio station WWDC by Ed Hart, painted a bright future picture, but he acknowledged there are "definite danger signals to look out for."

The final danger signal, he said, is "when people do not have enough income to buy the output of full production and full employment." Also to be watched, he continued, are "maladjustments" in the economic structure between price levels and income levels of the people.

Keyserling said the Nation, by adopting "the necessary policies" can avoid a depression, but "it won't happen automatically."

Transamerica Hearing Set For Tuesday

By the United Press

The Federal Reserve Board is ready to open hearings Tuesday on its antitrust charges against Transamerica Corp., holding company for the giant West Coast Giannini banking interests, and a spirited session is in prospect.

Last week the Giannini's asserted the charges were due solely to the personal animosity of board members Marriner S. Eccles and Lawrence Clayton, and demanded that both disqualify themselves.

Eccles, former board chairman, rejoined promptly that he already had withdrawn from the hearing because he wanted to be free to testify and dispel the bankers' allegations. Clayton did not reply.

Transamerica is charged with controlling the bulk of banking in California, Washington, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona in violation of the Antitrust Act.

In affidavits filed with the board, Transamerica accused Eccles of instigating the proceedings in an effort to promote "his selfish personal interest."

The Eccles family controls the First Securities Corp. of Utah which, like Transamerica, operates in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District. Transamerica said the Eccles concern is its "competitor."

Transamerica accused Clayton of being Eccles' "long-time handyman." In addition, it was asserted, Clayton has shown bias against Transamerica "since he was refused a job by Bank of America, in which Transamerica is a shareholder."

THOR ROSTAD AND YOUNG SON, SVEN

Ex-Sailor Tells Dramatic Tale Of Spiriting Son From Miami

Blond, 6-foot Thor Rostad stamped into the city room of The Washington Post yesterday with 2½-year-old Sven Rostad in tow and a story on his mind.

The story, it turned out, was the former Norwegian mariner's version of a frantic dash from Miami with Sven—a tale of a wartime romance on the rocks.

Thor wanted to tell his side of a story which the Miami Daily News carried on its front page last Thursday following an interview with Mrs. Rostad. He wanted to say he wasn't a fugitive from justice just because he walked off with Sven.

With a heavy, groping accent, Rostad, a former chief engineer in the Norwegian merchant marine told of domestic woe which began in a Tampa (Fla.) night club five years ago and ended with his dramatic race from Washington to Miami and back with the child.

He first saw America in 1943, he said, when the ship on which he was chief engineer put in to Miami. In a night club there, he met Pearl Smith, and three months later married her. He was not a citizen, although he had taken out his first papers.

He quit the sea in 1946, after 20 consecutive years in engine rooms from Singapore to Curacao.

In June of 1948, Rostad left Florida to take a job in College Park, Md., as a construction foreman. His wife remained in Florida with their son.

Three months ago, Rostad said he filed a suit in Prince Georges County for a limited divorce and custody of his young son. But the sheriff of Miami reported that he had been unable to locate Mrs. Rostad to serve the notice.

Last Wednesday morning, Rostad said, he decided to take matters into his own hands. He left for Miami by bus with $200 in his pockets, determined to return with his son. He said he had notified immigration authorities of his plans and reasons for going.

In Miami Thursday afternoon, he said he hired a lawyer and two private detectives. At 1:30 p. m. Friday, in a car driven by one of the detectives, Rostad arrived at 2931 2d ave. ne., where his wife lived.

Sven was playing in the back yard, the father related. Rostad grabbed the boy, tucked him under his arm, and sprinted back to the car.

By early Saturday morning his wife had notified Miami police. Rostad took a taxi to Fort Lauderdale, a train to Jacksonville and then boarded a bus to Washington. He arrived here at 1:50 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and walked to The Post Building.

Rostad's lawyer, Henry A. Babcock of 4107 Gallatin st., Hyattsville, said yesterday he had arranged with the Welfare Board of Prince Georges County to provide a home for the boy until things clear up for the Rostads.

N. Y. Bartenders Mark Repeal Date With Strike Call

New York, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Some 2500 bartenders celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of the repeal of prohibition today by making plans to turn Manhattan into a dry city once again, beginning at 8 a. m. Monday.

It was 15 years ago today, December 5, 1933, that the era of speakeasies and bathub gin ended after 13 years of prohibition.

The bartenders, members of Local 15 of the Barenders' Union (AFL), marked the occasion by voting unanimously to strike against the United Restaurant and Liquor Dealers Association. They want higher wages and a 40-hour week. Their present basic salary is $60 for a 48-hour week.

All of the Borough of Manhattan will be affected except the Times Square area, where the bartenders are represented by another union.

Near-Blizzard Hits Midwest; 7 Killed

Chicago, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—A near-blizzard roared into the Midwest from the Rocky Mountains today, icing roads and sending temperatures down sharply.

At least seven persons were reported killed in private plane crashes attributed to the weather.

The new winter storm of snow, rain and high wind roared through Kansas yesterday, the State's third such storm in two weeks.

The United States Weather Bureau here said the near-blizzard moved into western Iowa and eastern Nebraska today and spread northward to the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Full gale warnings were posted on Lakes Michigan and Superior.

Temperatures of 5 and 10 degrees above zero prevailed in Kansas and Nebraska. Much colder temperatures were forecast in the Midwest for Monday.

Four Dubuque, Iowa, youths were killed today when their borrowed plane crashed and burned shortly after takeoff.

Weather also caused the crash of a private plane in Wisconsin in which three Sturgeon Bay business men lost their lives. They apparently lost their way while on a flight from Fond du Lac to Sturgeon Bay yesterday.

Quake Puts 7 Vacationers In Hospital

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

SHAKEN DOWN—Elsie Van Der Schuur begins the task of cleaning up cosmetics and perfumes at a Palm Springs drug store after a severe earthquake rocked the California desert resort Saturday

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Southern California counted up thousands of dollars of damage today from a severe earthquake which put seven Palm Springs vacationers in a hospital.

The quake was stronger, although less damaging, than the one which wrecked Long Beach in 1933.

California Institute of Technology seismologists, who placed the center in the Coachella Desert near Indio, 100 miles east-southeast of Pasadena, said it was lucky it didn't happen in a populated area.

The desert resort of Palm Springs was most seriously damaged by shocks continuing for half an hour. Thousands of dollars worth of bottles and glasses were smashed in the town's dozens of bars and liquor stores. Plate glass windows cracked and shattered on the street, chandeliers and plaster fell from ceilings and tile from roofs and ancient adobe bricks, 16 inches thick, were cracked.

Kind U-Boat Chief Asks Testimonial; Will Get Gift, Too

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (AP).—On June 1, 1942, a German submarine, commanded by Otto V. Bulew of Hanover, sank the steamship West Notus 300 miles off Cape Hatteras.

Bulew rescued a wounded American, Francis Sherlock of Portland, Oreg. The German also saw to it that Fred Ritzenthaler of Mill Valley, Calif., and seven other Americans were saved.

Recently, Sherlock received a letter from Bulew, asking Sherlock to write Bulew's son about the sinking.

"I want my son to know I did not shoot at men in open lifeboats," Bulew wrote.

Sherlock passed the word to Ritzenthaler and both wrote.

Upshot of the exchanges: Bulew also is getting a Christmas package of coffee, tobacco and a pipe.

Freeze to Follow More Rain Today

More rain, followed by subfreezing temperature, was in store for Greater Washington today as numerous Virginia areas surveyed effects of weekend floods.

The rain here, for the first five days of December, was well over an inch above normal as of last night, the Weather Bureau reported.

The additional rain was forecast for this morning, with a 20-degree drop in temperature during the afternoon to a low of about 30 tonight.

Thus far this month, 1.58 inches of precipitation had been recorded at the Weather Bureau at National Airport. Normal for the period is .51.

The floods in Virginia had closed three roads yesterday, disrupted telephone service in one area, delayed some trains en route to Washington and caused others to be rerouted.

There were also high water areas reported in downstream areas of Maryland.

Most of the streams had reached their crests as of late yesterday, and a survey last night showed most receding.

Worst hit in Virginia was the Fluvanna - Buckingham - Goochland area along the James River. Telephone service, according to the Associated Press, remained out between Columbia and Palmyra, west of Richmond, but at Columbia where homes and stores were deluged with 2 feet of water Saturday, the people were beginning to move back.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad said it was rerouting part of its James River subdivision traffic over the Piedmont subdivision between Richmond and Gordonsville. Other rail traffic was also either rerouted or slowed in the James River area, railroad spokesmen said.

In Richmond, the State Highway Department said three primary roads were closed in spots.

Highways Affected

These were listed as Route 6, which runs parallel with the James River at Columbia and at Scottsville; Route 147, closed when the Westham bridge was endangered by water backed up on its approaches; and Route 522, along the South Anna River in Louisa County.

All main highway arteries, the department said, were open last night, but many of the State's secondary roads were out because of washed-out bridges.

R. P. Ellison of the Virginia Highway Department, said flood damage to the State's roads probably would run into five figures.

"I've told you a hundred times . . . the ones with lights are LAMPPOSTS!"

Petain Not in Danger

Paris, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Ministry of Justice said today the physical condition of Marshal Phillippe Petain, 94, imprisoned for treason," does not justify any reason for concern. Rumors have been spreading that his condition was poor.

was sick but would be all right. The boy returned at 5 o'clock, and again at 5:35. Both times Scheer was still sick.

Said He Had Not Been Hit

"Then John Griffith, 51, of 57 New York ave. nw., a carpenter and old friend of Scheer, dropped in, found Scheer ill, and asked him several times whether anyone had hit him. Scheer replied no one had hit him, he was just sick, had been that way about an hour. He said he had a headache and sick stomach. Griffith gave him two aspirin tablets he borrowed at a nearby delicatessen, and left.

"About 6:15 p. m., Perry Harris, 43, of 1206 O st. ne., who works for a metal company at 120 L st. ne. and often cashes checks at Scheer's, entered and found Scheer sick, but otherwise normal. He cashed Harris' check for $29 and accepted the usual 15-cent service charge.

"Griffith returned about 8 p. m. and got Scheer two more aspirin tablets. Scheer refused to let Griffith call Mrs. Scheer. Griffith went across the street to a liquor store and had the proprietor telephone Mrs. Scheer, but there was no answer. Mrs. Scheer was at a movie. Griffith returned to stay with Scheer and wait on several customers for him, asking Scheer the price of various articles and putting the money on top of the cash register.

Scheer finally called his wife, told her he was sick, and she and their son, Joel, went to the store. Joel went to nearby Sibley Hospital for help. Scheer's nephew, Dr. Manuel Laudman, arrived about the same time a hospital ambulance and doctor got there. Dr. Harry Friedenberg, 4519 36th st. nw., the Scheer family physician, also arrived. He had recently treated Scheer for a stomach disorder. The three doctors found no marks on Scheer's head.

"That was about 10 p. m., when Sergeant Huffman and I were cruising nearby. On our police radio we heard a call for an ambulance to go to Scheer's store. We had nothing else to do so we went there. We found Scheer sitting in a chair in the rear of the store. He had been vomiting. He was about semiconscious. I had Mrs. Scheer check the cash register. It was apparently all right. She then looked in the back part and found that $300 cash kept there for use in cashing checks was also undisturbed. The family then dismissed the ambulance and Dr. Laudman took Scheer to the hospital.

Fracture, Brain Lacerations

"There, X-rays showed an extensive skull fracture and brain lacerations. Dr. James W. Watts operated for a cerebral hemorrhage. Scheer had lapsed into complete unconsciousness and never regained consciousness before he died Saturday. The mystery is—how did he get the skull fracture? He must have had a blow on the head—doctors said that fracture could not have been inflicted by a fall.

"He was all right at 1:45, but sick at 4:30. The doctors say he could have been struck between those hours—might even have seen his assailant—might have regained consciousness and continued acting normally by force of habit without remembering he had been attacked. What we want to know now is—who was in the store besides Scheer from 1:45 to 4:30?"

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, said, "It would be possible for a person who has had a blow on the head to act normally, but remain in a sort of mental blank—a state of aphasia."

Police Store Detail of 25 To Begin Job

The Police Department's shopping detail will start work Friday, protecting downtown stores and shoppers from shoplifters, purse snatchers and other thieves who take advantage of holiday crowds.

Twenty-five policemen and policewomen will be on duty at downtown points where they are most needed.

Police ask shoppers to be careful not to leave packages laying on store counters while they examine merchandise, and to guard their pocketbooks with care.

Shoplifters and pickpockets have an easy time of it when they can operate in crowds, police explained. Unless a policeman or a store detective actually sees a thief lifting a customer's package, it is difficult to prove ownership.

Crowded aisles, elevators and escalators are the choice spots for store thieves.

The most common shoplifting method is for the thief to take small articles, hiding them under coats and in bags, while a saleswoman is busy with a customer, according to police. Frequently, two shoplifters work togather, one making a small purchase, while the other pilfers merchandise.

Peace Parleys In Java Fail

Jogjakarta, Java, Dec. 5 (U.P.)—Dutch-Indonesian peace talks have bogged down and "we are unable to continue discussions," Republican Premier Mohammed Hatta asserted today.

Hatta, in an exclusive interview aboard a United States Air Force transport, said his delegation and the Dutch reached a deadlock over who should control the Indonesian army during an interim period before the creation of a sovereign "United States of Indonesia."

Hatta flew from Batavia today. On the same plane were Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) and United States Col. William Mayer, chief of the United Nations team in Indonesia.

Shortly before, the Dutch delegation, headed by Foreign Minister D. U. Stikker, left by plane for Holland.

Referring to Dutch accusations that the republic was responsible for unrest in the Dutch-occupied area, Hatta said:

"We've done our best to avoid incidents. We've ordered our commanders to take special precautions along the frontier. We've proposed that both sides withdraw their troops from the U. N. demarkation line, but the Dutch rejected this proposal."

Health Bill to Pass, Murray Predicts

By The Associated Press

Sponsors of compulsory health insurance, under which wages and payrolls would be taxed to pay hospital and doctors' bills, expect to win a 10-year fight in the next Congress.

Senator Murray (D., Mont.) offered this prediction yesterday to a reporter "on the basis of two recent developments:"

"First, the election results plainly show the people of the country want a national health program that will make adequate modern medical care available to all. President Truman made this one of the real issues in his campaign.

"Second, the decision of the American Medical Association to raise a $3,500,000 political fund to oppose the plan openly should help our case in the public mind."

Murray said that he and other members of Congress who have been pushing the health insurance program since 1939 will drop it into the legislative hopper early in the next session, starting in January.

President Truman has publicly indorsed the vast health insurance program at various times since 1945 and the late President Roosevelt sponsored it before then.

Doctors and other critics term the plan "socialized medicine" and have bitterly opposed it, usually with help from most Republican leaders in Congress, in recent years.

"I want to be fair with the doctors and they will get a full hearing again before committees," Murray said.

"Actually the plan would not change present personal and individual relationships between doctors and patients," he said. "It merely would remove the financial worry about paying these bills from the people as well as the profession."

Ewing Praises Negro Gains

"The fine Negro people themselves, their character, education and culture" are gradually winning against discrimination, Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing yesterday told an audience of about 200 honoring Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Negro leader.

Mary Bethune

The group assembled at the Asbury Methodist Church, was celebrating the thirteenth anniversary of the founding by Mrs. Bethune of the National Council of Negro Women, of which she is president. Mrs. Bethune herself was unable to be present because of her duties at the Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona, Fla., which she also heads.

Ewing said he thought Negroes were making progress in all fields, "but there's a long way to go," he added. After comparing health statistics for Negroes and for white persons, he declared that "here in America, we've got to do something about it by mobilizing public opinion to help those of us who want to make America a shining light for the rest of the world."

Dr. Channing Tobias, director of the Phelps-Stokes Fund and a member of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, spoke of the recent denial of the use of Constitution Hall for a benefit concert on behalf of the NCNW.

"At this late day, despite the dramatization of the cause of civil rights, after all the embarrassment America has faced abroad because our Capital City derives its customs from the least enlightened section of the country," he said, "Mrs. Bethune's request was denied here—and that would not have been true in Atlanta, Raleigh or Dallas."

Other speakers included Mrs. Ailene Ewell, president of the local NCNW group; Mrs. Theodore Peyser, president of the Washington Chapter, National Council of Jewish Women; Mrs. Anna Lord Strauss, national president of the League of Women Voters, and Leslie Perry, administrative assistant of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Mrs. Venice Spraggs, chief of the Washington bureau, Chicago Defender, presided.

Hoffman Arrives In London for Ruhr Plant Talks

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Paul Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration, flew into London from Washington today to try to save some more Ruhr plants from dismantling, an issue which has caused sharp differences of opinion among the western powers.

He immediately began talks with Thomas K. Finletter, head of the ECA mission to Britain, and George Humphrey, Cleveland industrialist who headed a special ECA German plant committee.

Monday the committee will meet with Hoffman and American Ambassador Lewis Douglas to start drafting invitations to attend as observers.

Dental Program in Arlington's Negro Schools Starts Today

A program of dental care for pupils in Negro schools in Arlington County will be inaugurated today when examinations for the first of nearly 1000 pupils will begin at the Kemper School.

The program will be conducted through the State Health Department and will be under the direction of Dr. Fred D. Morton, senior clinician of the department's Burea of Mouth Health, school officials said. His services were obtained through the joint efforts of Dr. Thomas W. Pumphrey, dentist of the local school health department, and the Arlington School Board.

Dr. Morton is expected to remain in the county for several months, during which he will examine all Negro pupils and then report their findings to their parents. Corrective treatment will be charged those able to pay.

Negro pupils in Arlington schools have been without dental care for six years, due to a wartime interruption in the program coupled with a shortage of personnel, although a full-time dentist has been maintained in the white schools.

A schedule for the current clinic wil be adjusted to meet needs in each of the county's three Negro schools, according to school officials.

President to Keep Promises

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—President Truman has repeated his determination to fulfill all his campaign promises, including those on civil rights, Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson said today.

Gibson also said the new Congress will be asked to increase the number of displaced persons permitted to enter the United States, and to "minimize the discriminatory provisions" in the present DP law.

In an address before the Jewish labor committee here, he termed the President a "courageous and effective champion of civil rights and individual freedom."

"He stood firmly on a program to secure equality of treatment, economic opportunity, and political participation for all of our people, regardless of race, color, creed or national origin," Gibson said, and "the American people have indorsed his stand."

"Recently I discussed these matters with the President," he went on. "He told me that he intends to fulfill all of his campaign pledges, including civil rights."

Gibson also noted that Mr. Truman "frankly labeled the Displaced Persons Act of 1948 as anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic and a failure to meet American responsibilities toward these unfortunate people."

Twelfth Reprieve

On June 5, 1946, Patton and Wheeler committed the crime that resulted in their conviction for first degree murder. It was a fair trial and there is no reason to doubt that the sentence of death passed on these criminals will be carried out. Yet attorneys for the convicted men have managed to obtain for their clients 12 postponements of the execution date originally set for March 28, 1947—the twelfth reprieve being granted last Friday just 21 minutes before the time set for execution. Maybe the lawyers who have shown such ingenuity in taking advantage of legal technicalities to gain a few more months of life for their clients take pride in their achievements. But to the average layman, their chief accomplishment has been to demonstrate the need for reform of a system that makes it possible thus to defer the day of reckoning.

The sole justification for capital punishment lies in its supposedly restraining effect on potential criminals. The extreme penalty is decreed not to punish the convicted but as a warning to others. The salutary effect of such warnings is lost when, as in the present instance, delaying tactics result in confusing the issue and creating sympathy for the criminals themselves. Any killer, no matter how heinous his crime, is deservedly an object of pity when he has prepared not once but repeatedly to face death in the electric chair. False hopes of clemency are aroused, and then the awful mental strain of preparing to face the ordeal of planned extinction has to be undergone again. In the present instance, the condemned men had undergone all the preliminary preparations and escaped death by a mere matter of minutes. It is not surprising that Philip Allen, British official studying criminal justice here, is "horrified" by this inhumanity and shocked by the contrast between the two years required for execution of a convicted criminal here and the seven weeks required in England.

Latin Armies

Little Costa Rica has given meaning to its often repeated claim of "more teachers than soldiers" by formally abolishing its army. This move away from the military state is an encouraging contrast to developments elsewhere in Latin America where the role of armies in the direction of government has taken a sinister turn. It coincides, for example, with charges by Chile that an Argentine diplomat was involved in an attempted military coup against the Chilean government and with speculation that the recent army-led revolutions in Peru and Venezuela were inspired by Argentina.

The Costa Rican action has particular significance because that country itself has had a quasi-military government since the revolt led by Jose Figueres last spring. It does not end the possibility of armed uprising, since Figueres himself was able to raise an army against the government which had been playing with Communist forces and had sought to invalidate election returns. But certainly the reduction of uniformed forces to a national police of 1000 men and 700 reserve coast guardists makes less likely any military interference in domestic politics. It also implements the pledge of Figueres to return the country to democratic ways.

No evidence has come to light to link Argentina directly with the coups in Peru and Venezuela. There is no doubt, however, that the military juntas now ruling those countries are of the same stamp as the Peron regime in Argentina. The newspaper Tiempo of Bogota points out the ideological connection between the two recent revolts and their similarity to the revolt that paved the way for Peron in 1943. Peron's tactics of intimidation and economic aggression are well enough known to encourage the belief that the Peruvian and Venezuelan seizures had his moral if not physical support.

Army governments are now in power in Argentina, Peru, Venezuela and Nicaragua, not to mention that old standby, the Dominican Republic. In these countries the army has set itself up as superior to the will of the people. And, with modern weapons at their command, armies are in a position to keep power once they have seized it. Although the Peruvian and Venezuelan revolts were virtually bloodless, the wartime police state in Bolivia was a pretty ruthless affair which pointed the way to what can happen when totalitarian techniques are introduced. The growing influence of the military in Latin America illustrates the folly of any American policy which on the one hand seeks to promote Latin democracy and on the other gives arms which merely enable the enemies of democracy to entrench themselves.

Voice Of Authority

We hope that the Hoover Commission will think twice before adopting the recommendations by two of its experts to take the foreign information and education program out of the State Department. Among sweeping changes in the State Department, the Bundy-Rogers study reportedly proposes that the Voice of America broadcasts be handed over to a semipublic foundation and that the educational exchange program be transferred to the Office of Education. We have had no opportunity to review the reasons behind these proposals, but, it seems to us that their effect would be to break up what is just now becoming a smoothly functioning team.

When the idea of a foundation for foreign broadcasts was proposed by William Benton two years ago, we favored it as a solution to the problems raised by governmental operations in a hitherto entirely alien field. Subsequent events have caused us to change our mind. Foremost among the reasons is the fact that the various components of the information and education program cannot be treated as isolated pieces with no relation to one another. They are, in actuality, closely connected parts of the foreign policy of the United States. They cannot be divorced from direct State Department control without damaging the unity and effectiveness of foreign policy.

The most compelling argument for continuing the Voice of America in the State Department is that it speaks with unquestioned authority. People abroad believe it because it is the voice of the United States Government, which has a reputation for speaking the truth. Much has been made of the taint of Government propaganda. Such a taint, if it exists, could not be removed as long as the Government contributed any funds to or had any policy control over a broadcasting foundation. And a foundation that sought to hide its governmental connections would open itself to propaganda counterblasts that it was promoting big business or other special interests. It would lose the unique confidence that the Voice of America now is able to command.

The question is not one of mere broadcasting technicalities. If the Voice of America is to constitute a weapon of ideological warfare, as in fact it does, then the Government must have full responsibility for it. Inevitably a foundation, no matter how constituted, would invite divided responsibility. The recent unhappy experience with foreign broadcasts handled by private networks is a case in point. Furthermore, how could any agency but the State Department supervise the vital work of foreign information officers and libraries abroad—activities which are now correlated under control of regular ambassadors?

The same considerations govern the educational exchange program. Superficially the transfer to the Office of Education looks logical. But the similarity of activities ends with the name. Actually the educational exchange program, like the entire cultural relations endeavor, is part and parcel of foreign policy.

There is little point in altering the information and exchange programs unless there is a distinct guarantee that what is proposed will bring positive improvement in effectiveness. It is hard to see how the Bundy-Rogers recommendations can give any such guarantee. More than anything else, in our opinion, the Voice of America and allied operations need to be left alone, free of interference and carping criticism, with ample funds to carry on the unified program which has been evolved with such great effort.

Americans Abroad

A Budapest correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune reports that American delegates to a conference of the Women's International Democratic Federation are painting a black picture of life in the United States. According to the chairman of the American delegation, members of the affiliated Congress of American Women are losing their jobs, are being dragged before investigating committees, threatened with imprisonment and deportation, and in general subjected to intimidation. Negroes, especially, are being subjected to violence and terror, lynchings, beatings and life imprisonment. "This," the speaker concluded, "is the form that fascism is taking in its attempt to control America, disguised all the while as the defender of the American way of life, our Constitution and our national security."

It is true that there have been some excesses and invasions of rights in the course of the current drive to protect our institutions from subversive elements. But the mere fact that every newspaper in the country is free to attack policies and practices that in the name of national security go beyond the bounds of what seems just and fair to the individual refutes the irresponsible charges of citizens who abuse the liberties accorded them as Americans to defame their country.

It is also worth noting that, although the Congress of American Women is listed by the Department of Justice as a Communist organization, members of that organization have been permitted to leave the country, no doubt serenely confident that they will be allowed to return to their homes without fear of molestation, however vigorous their denunciation of this Government's methods may be. The official tolerance that permits such freedom of movement and license of speech is certainly not to be found under any Communist or Fascist regime; it exists only under free governments.

That freedom no true American would willingly destroy by taking direct action against Americans who misrepresent the country to foreigners. There is need, however, to counteract the effect of statements that give foreigners false impressions of conditions here. American press attaches in foreign countries can and should play an important part in bringing to the attention of the people what is actually happening here, what our Government is doing and how it does it. Working through the foreign press that is eager to obtain such information, they can do much more than can be done through the medium of broadcasting, at least in countries this side the iron curtain, to cement ties of friendship based on better understanding of our institutions.

To Limit The Veto

In the Vandenberg resolution of last June 11 the President was "advised of the sense of the Senate" that the Government should pursue certain policies within the United Nations Charter. Among them was "voluntary agreement to remove the veto from all questions involving pacific settlements of international disputes and situations and from the admission of new members." A resolution along these lines has now been jointly introduced in the Assembly by the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, and China.

The intent of the resolution is not to revise or amend the Charter—though Mr. Vishinsky says it is. It would keep the language of the Charter exactly as it now is, but grease its machinery. The four powers want the Assembly to recommend to the Security Council that the latter change its rules of procedure in accordance with recommendations of the "Little Assembly." In substance the five permanent members of the Council would pass a self-denying ordinance on themselves in agreeing not to exercise a veto in certain matters.

Among these particular kinds of votes would be admission of new members, procedures for the peaceful settlement of disputes under Article VI, appointment of special bodies to assist the Council, and, of course, purely procedural aspects of Council operations. None of these touch on the basic right of the big powers, recognized in the Charter, to stop collective action against themselves. And the United States is no more ready than is the Soviet Union to abandon technical immunity from being called to account for its international actions.

The present resolution, if adopted by the Assembly and applied by the Security Council—which is the real question—would undoubtedly strengthen the United Nations, though not very materially. However, a little improvement is better than none. Unfortunately the absence of the Soviet Union from among the resolution's sponsors probably foretells its fate. If Moscow runs true to form, this plea to the Security Council, like its predecessors of December 13, 1946, and November 21, 1947, will founder on the very rock it proposes to remove.

Hospital Dilemma

Washington's hospital problem has many different facets, and it is not to be supposed that any one solution will be found. Perhaps the basic trouble is that no one group of community leaders has taken the responsibility of developing an adequate hospitalization program. Many separate groups are working in the field, and much effort seems to be frittered away in overlapping activities. While this problem is being attacked and means are being devised to finance an adequate hospitalization program, now that the Community Chest has failed to reach its goal, two constructive steps can be taken at once with general benefit to the community.

One is the inauguration of the outpatient service that Dr. Ruhland is talking about. Gallinger Hospital finds many patients who have been treated and released returning for further hospitalization because there is no means of checking on the care they receive after leaving the hospital. That is a costly as well as inhumane policy. In Syracuse Dr. Ruhland found that hospitalization running from four to five weeks could be cut down to two weeks, with good results, when follow-up care was available to the patient in his home. Dr. Ruhland plans to use Health Department physicians, hospital staff members and senior medical students to make these calls at a cost of $2 a visit in place of $9 a day for hospitalization at Gallinger. His commendable suggestion should be as readily applied to charity patients leaving private hospitals as to patients leaving Gallinger.

The second change that can be made is to permit the use of District funds to help defray the cost of hospitalizing semi-indigent persons in private hospitals. It is absurd to say that the District shall aid sick people treated in private hospitals only if they are destitute. No such rigid test is made in admitting patients to Gallinger. It is obviously good sense to help the person who can pay part of his hospital bill without waiting until he becomes desperate. If such a policy cannot be reconciled with the present law, we think Congress should hasten to change it.

Charter Slate

A good deal of complaint is being registered as to the slate of nominees suggested by the Montgomery County Charter Committee for election to the new county council. Perhaps some of it is justified. But the chief objection seems to be that certain communities are not represented. Obviously it is impossible to give every community representation on a seven-man board. The real question, it seems to us, is whether this slate of nominees is capable of inaugurating the new charter government and giving it a good start. If it is (and certainly a number of the proposed councilmen are eminently qualified), then the charter movement has been well served by their selection. In any event, voters will have a chance to reject any person on the list who does not have widespread public confidence. We think they would be ill-advised, however, to make the selection on any other basis than the individual's ability and his sympathetic interest in giving the charter government an auspicious start.

Subsidized Health

All of us are praying that Mr. Truman's health security program will not be a political payoff to special interest or preferred economic groups. He can prove it is not by asserting dynamic leadership in the financial crisis that is paralyzing our health security program here.

This voteless community is the protege of the Federal Government. Every aspect of its administrative existence and political purpose is subject to the veto or approval of the White House. This is true of our health program. When victims of tuberculosis do not get humane treatment conforming to minimal civilized standards our Federal Government is to blame. When medical care of the indigent and marginal security groups breaks down there is crying need for compassionate leadership from our President.

Our hospitals are bankrupt. They continue to operate under paralyzing deficit spending. Much of their debt represents humane service to the needy who could not pay in whole or only in part. Theoretically Congress has appropriated funds to guarantee adequate health security for indigent. But there is no provision for self-help for the medically indigent. By definition this is a huge group of taxpayers who are solvent and self-supporting until faced with a major health liability.

Confronted with the grave problem of legally reimbursing hospitals for being humane to tax-eligibles and the medically indigent our Commissioners are toying with the idea of an administrative expedient. They are reporting as weighing a new definition of indigency. Those merely needing self-help would become a total burden on the taxpayer as tax eligibles. This would be a class-conscious paternalism.

If Mr. Truman permits his subordinates to solve our hospital crisis by tax subsidy of preferred economic groups it will betray a basic weakness of his human welfare state. It will imply that health security is to be granted priority on the basis of income levels. Such a means test as a condition to qualify for national health security is repugnant to every liberal. Liberals would be encouraged by Mr. Truman declaring that Federal aid shall be self-help for all the needy rather than an outright subsidy for those fortunate enough to be included in his Commissioners' definition.

Photo-Finishes

In the very interesting article of November 1 "Photo-finishes Rare in Elections," after referring to "the neck-and-neck race" for the Presidency between President Wilson and Charles Evans Hughes in 1916, it is stated: "There has been only one other really close contest since the Civil War—the Hayes-Tilden dispute of 1876 . . ."

But in the campaign of 1884 a plurality for Cleveland over Blaine, announced as 1149, in the popular vote of New York decided the election; by that margin Blaine lost the 36 electorial votes of that State and the Presidency. The difference in the New York count was so small that a switch of 575 votes from Cleveland to Blaine would have changed the result.

The outcome was in great doubt for some time. As a historian in writing of that election says: "The vote in New York was so close that both parties claimed its electorial vote for several days and the corrected returns as they came in showing differences from the first hasty returns were studied with intense anxiety."

In the 1916 contest President Wilson by gaining a plurality over Hughes in California obtained the electoral vote of that State and the election; this plurality was 3806 votes.

Chinese People

Perhaps we can afford to bungle over the Chinese problem. The world has changed so swiftly that we are entitled to a percentage of error. But how about the Chinese, the victims of the corruption and incompetence of the Chinese leaders we financed and supported? Their victims' mildest criticism might be that our policy had been devoid of imagination. But it might go further and quote from our own Charles Ferguson: "The sickest nation is the nation in which great cruelties have become wholly impersonal, chargable to no man."

Can we not find a way to focus our wealth and technology on this humanitarian problem? Hasn't the time come for the world to put first the well-being and reconstruction of the Chinese people? No nation is wise enough to do this alone. And even if it were, it would be politically disastrous for any single nation, especially a self-appointed one, to attempt it.

Isn't the UNESCO fitted to this task? Does not Article 62 of the United Nations Charter empower it? Surely no nation which sincerely desires to retain the policy of "the open door" in China need fear that a sound policy of reconstruction would close it.

Poor News Evaluation

The letter of November 30 by Francis S. Pierce on the subject "Biased Newspapers," is indeed interesting to me as a reader of The Washington Post. And while I agree thoroughly with his analysis, particularly as to the value of facts in newspaper reporting, I believe, however, that we, as readers, are inclined to interpret as biased, any news item which has been "overnewsed" at the sacrifice of important and available facts.

I cite for instance, a news item carried by local newspapers recently—"Firemen will be used for inaugural parade in place of out-of-town police," which in some papers was given top-page-bold-type prominence as a news item, and went on to imply that this was a new practice which means a saving in District funds.

The "biased" impression in this news item is in what appears to be a deliberate attempt to evade known facts on the subject, for a purpose. The fact is that firemen have always been used on this and other such occasions whether out-of-town police were hired or not, and in justice to the taxpayer and the firemen, the report should have noted the fact that firemen off duty are used for this detail for which they do not receive extra pay.

This is not "biased" news. It is the improper evaluation of pertinent and available facts which are always looked for by the reader.

Spanish Catholics

In the expression of thought, the use of sterotyped cliches is always a dangerous practice. Such occurs when the baneful catchword "Fascist" is applied unhesitatingly to Spain, as Mr. Morris Smith has done in his November 27 letter to you.

Neither the present Spanish admisistration nor even Falange itself can accurately be called "Fascist." Both the term and the concept have been vehemently rejected in Spain as far back as 1933. International dictation is a bugbear to the Spaniard, profoundly individualistic and independent both singly and as a nation: his basic nonconformity of spirit precludes him also from facile plagiarism. The Spain of today can only be properly defined as being a popular authoritarian state which is inspired in Spanish and Catholic traditions.

The Catholic Church never has held any inhibitions in declaring to the world what it exactly thinks of anyone or of any problem. The encyclicals Mit Brenender Sourge and Divini Redemptoris of 1937 condemned nazism and communism, and fascism within Italy was on different occasions publicly denounced. It is injurious to state therefore that the "church aids the growth of fascism."

The open pronouncements made by the Vatican in regard to Spain since 1937 have been couched in terms of amity and encouragement. Apart from the fact that in accordance with the religious beliefs of the overwhelming majority of Spaniards, the Catholic Church is permitted complete liberty of action, if Rome had considered it necessary it would not have hesitated to censure the present Spanish regime to the extent it would have thought fit, with the immediate response of the faithful.

"People In The News"

On the second page of The Washington Post you are rendering one of the most important services for your readers ever offered by the daily newspaper.

You report the happenings of the day and the interpretations of these events. Now by virtue of your "People in the News" the searchlight is cast upon local, national and international persons who are responsible, but in many cases should not be, for the welfare of their neighbors.

When the news spotlight is cast upon men in relation to the history of events, would it not be well to quickly cast the shafts upon these people who so influence our destinies? This, to a great extent, is being done by Sam Stavisky. With the limited space and time, he does an enlightening, interesting and often entertaining job.

It is good to know who these people are and what makes them tick.

Religious Instruction

There are 8760 hours in a year. Of those 8760 hours, a child spends less than 900 hours per year in public school. Surely the remaining 7860 hours per year provide ample time for adequate religious instruction outside the school—and in the religion of the parents' choice.

On the basis of these figures alone, it is impossible to see the need for so-called "released time" from classes for the purpose of religious instruction—or for the need of religious instruction in the public schools. It looks as though the churches have failed to make the most of their opportunity. With so many nonschool hours to call upon, why must the church invade the public school?

On Scaling Parnassus

THE LIMITS OF ART: Collected and edited by Huntington Cairns. (Pantheon Books, $6.50.)

The proliferation of anthologies has, I think, been the most conspicuous recent tendency of the book-publishing trade, and I take it for an evil sign. It seems to suggest that we are moving from decadence into dotage; that everything worth saying has not only been said, but said better than anyone will every say it again. There is seemingly nothing left for us but to rake over the ashes of a dead culture and contrive thereby an illusion of spiritual warmth. Some such thought, perhaps, was in the mind of the artist who designed the dust jacket for the present collection; he has imposed against a background of mourner's black what appears to be a funerary urn, out of which rises a sprig of living ivy.

Mr. Cairns' anthology, however, is not of the sort which can be thrown together with little effort by almost any editor with a reasonably good library at his elbow. What Mr. Cairns has sought to embalm for us in these pages are the finest things that have ever been thought or imagined or experienced and expressed in any Western European language, living or dead. This is what he means by the limits of art, those frontiers of beauty or sublimity in language, beyond which it is not in the power of even genius to venture. He borrows the phrase from a fragment attributed to the Attic painter, Parrhasius, whose works have perished, though legend says of them that they were such wonderful imitations of nature they were sometimes mistaken for the reality. Parrhasius, who was evidently not one to undervalue himself, asserted that his work had set a mark of achievement that would never be surpassed by any artist who might come after him. The problem that Mr. Cairns set for himself was to discover how often and by whom such perfection or grandeur had been reached in the arts of literature, and to this work he applied his vast and diligent scholarship. Where the passage for which perfection is claimed is in another language than English, Mr. Cairns presents both the original and a well-chosen translation. In the case of Greek texts, however, his publishers have done Mr. Cairns and his readers a grievous disservice by having had them set, as has become the fashion, in a vertical and crowded modern face which has neither the beauty nor the legibility of the cursive characters.

What Mr. Cairns needed most was some measurement of value; and the one that he chose was authority, or to use a fancier and perhaps more accurate word, expertise. He admitted to his anthology any passage of which some critic ancient or modern has spoken in superlative terms, such as "finest," "greatest," "most wonderful," and so on. But since hyperbole is the professional vice of critics, he needed another criterion to determine which critics have the right to indulge it. Here his test has been one of reputation in what appears to be a purely quantitative sense, and this accounts no doubt for the curious incongruity of the critical names to be found in Mr. Cairns' indices, Aristotle and D. H. Lawrence, Irving Babbitt and Mr. H. L. Mencken, Professor Gilson and Amy Lowell, Fenelon and Oswald Spengler, Arnold and Macaulay, John Keble and James Joyce, Belloc and Brandes, Dryden and Henry James. Some of these are admitted to the collection in the status of both artist and critic, though not of course, like Parrhasius, as critics of their own work. The advantage of this method is that it absolves Mr. Cairns of responsibility for the verdict in any given case. It also permits him to include as examples of a common perfection the Pange lingua gloriosi of St. Thomas Aquinas and the Après midi d'un Faune of Mallarme, passages from the Symposium and the Phaedo and from Finnegans Wake, the Prologue to the Canterbury Tales and the conclusion to The Spoils of Poynton, the apostrophe to the Virgin from the Paradisio and the Bateau Ivre of Rimbaud. The weakness of the method is that it encourages the reader—where he finds a half dozen different judges variously awarding the supremacy in the same field, or finds such an enthusiast as the late Maurice Baring claiming it simultaneously for a half dozen different poets—to conclude that there are, after all, no objective standards of beauty, and that his own subjective impressions are as reliable a guide as any. Under this principle I cannot quarrel with any of Mr. Cairns' selections; neither can he quarrel with me if I say that he has overlooked the two most beautiful lines in English, which are, as I think:

Fire and sleet and candle-light
And Christe receiue thy saule.

And yet I believe that Mr. Cairns' anthology does accomplish much of what he intended for it, that it does include, with a good deal that is doubtful or merely specious, many of the noblest effects of which language has been capable. I am no relativist in these matters, but my own measure for them is simply that of time. Those things are most sublime which have been capable of exciting or exalting successive generations of men under varying circumstances, and may therefore be said to transcend all esthetic fashion. Thus, since Mr. Cairns' arrangement of his materials is chronological, the plausibility of the verdicts on them slowly diminishes as one turns the pages.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Survival Demands No Less

A STRIKINGLY interesting idea for strengthening American defense organization is being quietly discussed in the upper reaches of the Administration. No single chief of staff of all the armed services was provided in the law unifying the Army, Navy and Air Force. The motive was fear of concentration of power. But the result has been to leave a vacuum of authority in the crucial area where roles, millions and broad strategy must be professionally weighed.

The idea is simply to appoint as "chairman" of the Joint Chiefs of Staff a distinguished senior officer with sufficient personal prestige to cast the deciding vote as between the embattled services. The retirement on January 20 of the President's personal chief of staff, Admiral William Leahy, will leave a vacancy which can be filled in this manner.

The man whose name is currently being mentioned for this vital task is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. All those who are attracted by the new scheme admit that it would be unfair to ask General Eisenhower to leave Columbia University for more than a brief period. But a mere three or four months will be quite sufficient to do the essential job. This job is simply to adopt an agreed long-range American strategic plan, and to assign to each of the services its detailed responsibiites under that plan.

EVEN THIS MEASURE of basic agreement has never been fully achieved by the services to date. But much valuable spadework has already been accomplished, under the determined leadership of Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal, at the Key West and Newport interservice meetings. What is needed now is simply a professional officer, clothed with the authority of the President, who will spell out in practice the principles adopted at Newport and Key West.

General Eisenhower, with his great standing and complete disinterestedness, is the obvious choice. When he has finished laying the foundation of full agreement, the proposed chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff can pass to another officer —Gen. Omar Bradley is most often named—who can then carry on where Eisenhower has left off. Such is the scheme now being mooted.

The proposal at least indicates the justification for President Truman's recent insistence on economy by the services. Every expert on the world situation believes that it will be suicidal folly for budgetary economy to be carried to the length of sacrificing American rearmament. But the experts are also unanimous that the United States must get more defense for each dollar invested. And the first essential step in this direction is to name a single professional officer capable of deciding purely professional interservice disputes.

The truth is that the President's impulse to force the services to economize is completely correct. But the approach to date, by setting a rigid service budget ceiling of 15 billion dollars, has been dangerously wrong. The Army, Navy and Air Force are all like fat men. If you tell a fat man, "on pain of death, you must lose 30 pounds tomorrow morning," he can only go to a doctor and have a leg cut off. That is what the services have done, drawing up plans to cut back combat strength without which this country and the world will be in deadly danger.

ON THE OTHER HAND, if you tell a fat man, "You have a year to get yourself in hard condition," he can diet and exercise until the blubber has been replaced by muscle. This is what the services can do, if the budget provides for the immediate needs of American rearmament, and the President then gives the service chiefs 12 months to put their organizations through a really severe course of sprouts. But one reason why the services are often fantastically wasteful today is the continuing interservice struggle which perpetuates a sort of "keeping up with the Jones" phychology. If they are to be put in hard condition, the services desperately need an impartial trainer. And this, fundamentally, is to be the role of the proposed chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He will also have plenty of other urgent jobs to do. There is, for example, the Navy's failure to devise an effective defense against the German type XXI submarine, now in Soviet hands. Without anti-submarine defense, any American war will be crippled. Equally, there is the Air Force's continuing difficulty in reaching and locating distant, well-defended strategic targets. This also could be crippling. Such expert but disinterested observers as the leaders of the Joint Research and Development Board feel that present efforts, in both cases, are inadequate. Some one is needed with authority to insist upon more intensive effort in these, and several other fields.

Although the President has the authority to recall him to duty, General Eisenhower may of course escape this burdensome new assignment. Although General Bradley could also do the job, the whole scheme may even fall through. But the signs suggest that necessity, which is the mother of invention, is at last bringing to a close the long story of chaos and mutual bitterness between the services. If we are to survive in this bleak world, this much at least is essential.

'Ike' Sizes Up Soviet and Challenge to U.S.

more vivid picture of what the men in any one of our divisions would have had to say about the matter had we attempted to make such a practice a part of our tactical doctrine. Americans assess the cost of war in terms of human lives, the Russians in the over-all drain on the nation.

Little Concern Shown To Maintain Morale

As far as I could see, Zhukov had given little concern to methods that we considered vitally important to the maintenance of morale among American troops: systematic rotation of units, facilities for recreation, short leaves and furloughs, and, above all, the development of techniques to avoid exposure of men to unnecessary battlefield risks, all of which, although common practices in our Army, seemed to be largely unknown in his.

The basic differences between American and Russian attitudes in the handling of men were illustrated on another occasion. While talking to a Russian general I mentioned the difficult problem that was imposed upon us at various periods of the war by the need to care for so many German prisoners.

I remarked that they were fed the same rations as were our own soldiers. In the greatest astonishment he asked, "Why did you do that?" I said, "Well, in the first place my country was required to do so by the terms of the Geneva Convention. In the second place the Germans had some thousands of American and British prisoners and I did not want to give Hitler the excuse or justification for treating our prisoners more harshly than he was already doing."

Again the Russian seemed astonished at my attitude and he said, "But what did you care about men the Germans had captured? They had surrendered and could not fight any more." However, these statements did not necessarily mean that the Russians were cruel or were innately indifferent to human life.

Reasons Recalled For Vindictiveness

The experience of Russia in World War II was a harsh one. The year 1941 saw the entire western portion of that country overrun by the Nazis. From the region of the Volga westward, almost everything was destroyed. When we flew into Russia, in 1945, I did not see a house standing between the western borders of the country and the area around Moscow.

All this would have embittered any people; it would have been completely astonishing if the Russians had not had a more direct and personal vindictiveness toward the Germans and a sterner attitude toward the realities of war than was the case in countries far removed from the scene of hostilities.

I know that in my personal reactions as the months of conflict wore on, I grew constantly more bitter against the Germans, particularly the Hitler gang. On all sides there was always evidence of the destruction that Hitler's ruthless ambitions had brought about.

During the war hundreds of broken-hearted fathers, mothers and sweethearts wrote me personal letters, begging for some hope that a loved one might still be alive, or, at the very least, for some additional detail as to the manner of his death. Every one of these I answered, and I know of no more effective means of developing an undying hatred of those responsible for aggressive war than to assume the obligation of attempting to express sympathy to families bereaved by it.

Marshal Zhukov showed little interest in measures that I thought, after Allied experience in North Africa and Europe, should be taken to protect the foot soldier and to increase his individual effectiveness. The Russians viewed measures to protect the individual against fatigue and wounds as possibly too costly. Great victories, they seem to think, inevitably require huge casualties.

Final Visit Marked By Two-Hour Talk

I saw Marshal Zhukov for the last time November 7, 1945. It was a Soviet holiday, in honor of which he gave a large reception in Berlin, inviting to it the senior commanders and staff officers of all the Allies.

When I arrived Marshal Zhukov, with his wife and a number of his senior assistants, was standing in the receiving line. He greeted me and then promptly deserted the receiving line. He took his wife by the arm, and the three of us, with an interpreter, retired to a comfortable room where were refreshments of all kinds. We talked for two hours.

The tenor of the marshal's conversation was that he believed we in Berlin had done something to help the difficult problem of promoting understanding between two nations so diverse in their cultural and political conceptions as were the United States and the Soviet Union. He felt that we could accomplish still more. He talked at length about the new United Nations and remarked: "If the United States and Russia will only stand together through thick and thin success is certain for the United Nations. If we are partners there are no other countries in the world that would dare go to war when we forbade it."

The marshal seemed to be a firm believer in the Communist concept. He said that, as he saw it, the Soviet system of government was based upon idealism, and ours upon materialism.

In expanding his idea of this difference he remarked—and introduced an apology because of his criticism—that he felt our system appealed to all that was selfish in people. He said that we induced a man to do things by telling him he might keep what he earned, might say what he pleased, and in every direction allowed him to be largely an undisciplined, unoriented entity within a great national complex.

Sincerity of Zhukov Beyond Question

He asked me to understand a system in which the attempt was made to substitute for such motivations the devotion of a man to the great national complex of which he formed a part. In spite of my complete repudiation of such contentions and my condemnation of all systems that involved dictatorship, there was no doubt in my mind that Marshal Zhukov was sincere.

The marshal told me that a book written by an American about Russia stated that Marshal Zhukov was shorter by 2 or 3 inches than his wife, and that he had two sons. This story irritated him because he saw in it personal disparagement and belittlement.

He and his wife stood up for a moment and he said, "Now you see what kind of lies some of your writers publish about us." And he added, "Also, we have no sons. We have two daughters."

He referred to a picture of the Generalissimo published by one of our magazines. This was not a personal photograph but was a likeness of a painted portrait that hung in one of the Berlin night clubs. The magazine picture had been taken in such a way that, with seeming intent, the Generalissimo's portrait was photographed in most unfortunate and undignified surroundings.

This literally infuriated the marshal. He turned to me and said: "If a picture of you like this one should appear in a Russian magazine, I would see that the magazine ceased operations at once. It would be eliminated. What are you going to do?"

Correspondence Ends In Spring of 1946

This called for me to describe the free press of America, but after an earnest and, I thought, eloquent attempt I found that I had made no impression whatsoever. The marshal merely repeated "If you are Russia's friend you will do something about it."

Even after I returned to the United States the marshal and I continued, until April, 1946, to correspond on our accustomed friendly terms. In the spring of that year he was relieved from his Berlin command and I have never since heard from him directly. It was rumored that he was out of favor—that for some reason he had fallen from the high place he held in Russian affections and popular esteem during the late months of the war.

One of the speculative reasons given for his virtual disappearance was his known friendship with me. I cannot believe that such was the case because, in spite of that friendship, he always seemed to be profoundly convinced of the essential rectitude of the Communist theory.

He knew that I was an uncompromising foe of communism because I believed that it was synonymous with dictatorship; he would listen patiently when I said that I hated everything that smacked of statism, and that our whole Western tradition was devoted to the idea of personal liberty. But his own adherence to the Communistic doctrine seemed to come from inner conviction and not from any outward compulsion.

The policy of firm adherence to the pledged word of our Government was first challenged shortly after the close of hostilities. Some of my associates suddenly proposed that when so requested by the Russians I should refuse to withdraw American troops from the line of the Elbe to the area allocated to the United States for occupation.

The argument was that if we kept troops on the Elbe the Russians would be more likely to agree to some of our proposals, particularly as to a reasonable division of Austria. To me, such an attitude seemed indefensible.

West Might Have Had More German Land

I always felt that the Western Allies could probably have secured an agreement to occupy more of Germany than we actually did. I believe that if our political heads had been as convinced as we were at SHAEF of the certainty of early victory in the West they would have insisted, at Yalta, upon the line of the Elbe as the natural geographic line dividing the eastern and western occupation areas.

This, however, is pure speculation. I have never discussed the matter with any of the individuals directly responsible for the decision.

In any event the Berlin record of those late summer and early autumn months of 1945 represents the peak of post-war cordiality and cooperation that we were ever able to achieve with the Soviet officials. In broader fields, on highest levels, misunderstandings continued to grow and these were inevitably reflected in the local German scene. It is possible, also, that this process worked in reverse.

Americans at that time—or at least we in Berlin—saw no reason why the Russian system of government and democracy as practiced by the Western Allies could not live side by side in the world, provided each respected the rights, the territory, and the convictions of the other, and each system avoided overt or covert action against the integrity of the other.

Implications of Failure Recall Events of 30's

But even such a purely practical basis for living together in the world has not been achieved.

The implications of the failure to eliminate aggression and to cooperate effectively are as full of meaning for the world as were the dictatorial and arbitrary acts in the late 1930s of Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito. The name of almost every small country of eastern Europe is a remainder to us of the lost objectives so bravely stated in the Atlantic Charter, even before Pearl Harbor Day. Fear, doubt and confusion are the portion of those who fought and won the war with the fervent prayer that at last this was the war to end wars.

Military preparedness alone is an adequate answer to the problem. Communism inspires and enables its militant preachers to exploit injustices and inequity among men.

The areas in which freedom flourishes will continue to shrink unless the supporters of democracy match Communist fanaticism with clear and common understanding that the freedom of men is at stake; meet Communist-regimented unity with the voluntary unity of common purpose, even though this may mean a sacrifice of some measure of nationalistic pretensions; and, above all, annul Communist appeals to the hungry, the poor, the oppressed, with practical measures untiringly prosecuted for the elimination of social and economic evils that set men against men.

As a world force, democracy is supported by nations that too much and too often act alone, each for itself alone. Nowhere perfect, in many regions democracy is pitifully weak because the separatism of national sovereignty uselessly prevents the logical pooling of resources, which would produce greater material prosperity within and multiplied strength for defense. Such division may mean ideological conquest.

World Is Too Small For Rigid Concepts

The democracies must learn that the world is now too small for the rigid concepts of national sovereignty that developed in a time when the nations were self-sufficient and self-dependent for their own well-being and safety. None of them today can stand alone.

We believe individual liberty, rooted in human dignity is man's greatest treasure. We believe that men, given free expression of their will, prefer freedom and self-dependence to dictatorship and collectivism. From the evidence, it would appear that the Communist leaders also believe this; else why do they attack and attempt to destroy the practice of these concepts? Were they completely confident in the rectitude and appeal of their own doctrine, there would be no necessity for them to follow an aggressive policy. Time would be the only ally they needed if Communism as a spiritual force and moral inspiration appealed more to mankind than do individual right and liberties.

We who saw Europe liberated know that the communistic fear that men will cling to freedom is well founded. It is possible that this truth may be the reason for what appears to be an aggressive intent on the part of the Communists to tear down all governmental structures based upon individual freedom.

If the men and women of America face this issue as squarely and bravely as their soldiers faced the terrors of battle in World War II, we would have no fear of the outcome. If they will unite themselves as firmly as they did when they provided, with their allies in Europe, the mightiest fighting force of all time, there is no temporal power that can dare challenge them. If they can retain the moral integrity, the clarity of comprehension, and the readiness to sacrifice that finally crushed the Axis, then the free world will live and prosper, and all peoples, eventually, will reach a level of culture, contentment and security that has never before been achieved.

This is the final installment of General Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe."

Chinese War Called Peasant Revolution

The Chinese government is facing a peasant revolution today which started in 1911 and may not end for half a century, according to Nelson T. Johnson, one of the State Department's top Far East experts.

Speaking before the Young Adults of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church last night, Johnson said he frankly did not know whether United States dollars could save the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

"But more than money can be given," he added.

Johnson, who has spent most of his 61 years in China representing this country, said that the Communists were appealing to the Chinese peasant on the basis of the peasant's problems during the revolution, which, he said, had quickly destroyed a way of life that had changed little in thousands of years.

This revolution cannot be stopped today, Johnson said, by anybody. He reminded his audiences that it took almost 300 years for western civilization to reap the benefits of the Renaissance and Reformation.

Approximately 100 people heard the talk of the former Minister to China.

South to Start Regional Plan To Aid Education

Atlanta, Dec. 5 (AP).—The South's share-the-wealth move in college education is slated to get out of the talking stage and into action next week.

Southern governors, flanked by 150 college presidents and deans, meet in Savannah next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to discuss the Nation's pioneer plan for regional education.

They are expected to adopt their first specific program for regional operations, in at least one field—veterinary education.

And they will outline more research and spadework toward extending their scheme into almost all branches of higher education.

The idea is that by regional planning and financing, the South can provide far more and better education than the single states could work out individually.

Chinese Have 66% of Aid Authorized

By The Associated Press

More than two thirds of the supplies scheduled for China under the Foreign Aid Act have been authorized and nearly half have been delivered.

Reporting this yesterday, the Economic Cooperative Administration said that slightly more than 200 million dollars of the 275-million-dollar program of economic aid to the hard-pressed Nationalist government has been for commodity purchases. The rest is going for rural and industrial reconstruction.

Food valued at $19,200,000 already has arrived in China to keep alive the food rationing program in six major cities. It consists mainly of rice from Burma.

Oil valued at 29 million dollars has been sent and the Chinese textile industry has been kept running with shipments of 54 million dollars' worth of cotton.

ECA also reported that approved recovery shipments to Europe and China last week totaled $86,166,432.

This raised the authorized volume of ECA dollar grants to $3,875,602,331. Britain was shown as the largest recipient of Marshall Plan help, with approvals totaling $1,060,878,347. France was next with $898,877,538, and Italy third with $422,683,650.

Meantime, Senator Capper (R., Kans.) referred to the mission of Madame Chiang Kai-shek to the United States as a "forlorn hope."

The wife of the Chinese Nationalist leader is here seeking greatly increased aid in the war with Communists. She is expected to see President Truman this week.

But Capper noted that "she is not being received officially by the Government." Her reception is "pretty much of an indication of what she may expect," he observed.

Fire-eating Bookworm Builds a House . . .

The Washington Post

WALTER RAVE, A BOOK AND A HOUSE . . .

By Judith F. Spivak
Post Reporter

A District fireman, who never did any building before in his life, is putting up a six-room house near Annandale, Va., with the help of library books.

The rambling brick veneer bungalow, half completed now, will cost only about $9000 when it's finished, Walter Rave of 2620 29th st. se., estimates. Home appraisers, however, already have assured him it will be worth around $23,000.

The 32-year-old Rave, whose only previous construction experience was "high school stuff—bookends and a bench, maybe," says he started building the house himself for his wife and 3-year-old son out of "desperation."

Bought Site in 1940

He's owned the 3-acre site on Walton lane, a mile from Annandale, since 1940, Rave says, when he paid $1000 for it, intending to have contractors build for him whenever construction costs fell.

"I finally saw prices weren't coming down," Rave explains, "and I had to do something. I didn't plan on living in an apartment all my life."

Since October, 1947, when he started work, Rave has relied on District library boks to teach him to be his own bricklayer, mason, carpenter, roofer and glazier.

He still makes two stops a week at the Southwest Public Library branch, a couple blocks from his job at No. 13 Engine Company, at 10th and G sts. sw.

Rave began work on his home with a set of $5 plans from Sears Roebuck as a guide. Practically all the rest of the $3000 he's spent so far has gone into materials, the chief exceptions being $100 to excavate the cellar and $230 to have a well drilled.

Mostly One-Man Job

Four neighbors gave him a hand putting in two 600-pound steel beams, plus a couple smaller ones, and his father came down from New York to help him get the asphalt shingles on the roof—a one-month job. Otherwise it's been a one-man job, Reve says.

The fireman puts in a 35-hour week on his home-to-be when he's on night duty every other week, and spends his weekends on the house otherwise. Working the night shift lets him catch his sleep between alarms, he says.

"I'll be glad when it's done," says Rave, who has yet to "brick up" the outside, and add interior plaster, plumbing, electricity, and an oil heating unit.

"My wife's been a widow and my poor child's an orphan," he points out ruefully.

The Fire Department private, whose yearly salary is $3300, says his chief worry now is lack of funds. Just about through his cash savings, he's having trouble getting a loan on his self-constructed home, though bankers tell him it's solidly built and way above minimum safety requirements.

Parkside P-TA Sets School Play Panel

A panel discussion on school recreation and play facilities will be held during a meeting of the Parkside Parent-Teacher Association at 8 p. m. Tuesday at the school on Parkside dr. in Silver Spring.

Participating in the discussion will be Clement J. McBride, supervisor of physical education for Montgomery County schools, and Wilbur Irving and Samuel Snyder, parents of Parkside students.

Among the matters to be brought out will be a model plan for a school playground and how to finance, equip and put one into effect.

Conference on Married State Held at Bethesda Church

The first all-day regional Cana Conference—a Catholic movement aimed at helping couples realize more of the potential of the married state—was held yesterday at Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Bethesda.

Father John O'Sullivan, post-graduate student at Catholic University and a former Army chaplain, conducted the conference, which began at 8:30 a. m. and ended at 4:30 p. m. More than 60 persons were present at the outset, with others swelling the attendance throughout the day, according to the Rev. Elmer T. Fisher, pastor.

Following mass, the conference got under way with a discussion of the married state. A recreation period, luncheon and discussions, with question and answer periods interspersed. The day-long session concluded with a renewal of marriage vows before the altar.

In attendance were members of Our Lady of Lourdes Parish and the neighboring parishes of Blessed Sacrament, St. Michael's, St. John's, St. Bernadette's, St. Martin's in Gaithersburg, Holy Redeemer in Kensington and St. Mary's in Rockville. Children spent the day at Bethesda Recreation Center.

Too Many in College, Yale Head Says

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 5 (AP).—President Charles Seymour of Yale said today that the "menace of educational mediocrity rises on the horizon" because of the large enrollment in the Nation's colleges. Yale now has 9000 students, two-thirds of them undergraduates.

Asserting it was time to "begin to taper off," Dr. Seymour said in a report to the alumni:

"The implications of the report of the educational commission appointed by President Truman, that the more students given a college education the better for the country, do not apply to an institution such as Yale.

"Our service to the Nation, as I have said many times, will not lie in the number of Yale graduates, but in their quality."

Old Gold thanks

The Journal of the American Medical Association

for cracking down on "cure claims" in cigarette ads

Old Gold has been saying it a long, long time...
A good cigarette is a treat... not a treatment.
And there's no place in a cigarette ad for medical mumbo-jumbo.

Now comes the highly respected JOURNAL OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION to take up a similar cudgel. In a forthright and widely quoted editorial, it cites evidence that most physicians themselves smoke cigarettes. But it spanks the ad-makers who ballyhoo "cure claims" in cigarette ads, or who tie their claims to the coat-tails of doctors.

To some smokers under the spell of these claims... maybe Old Gold's bid for new friends seems tame. Old Gold promises no remedy... merely smoking pleasure. But a lot of folks seem to like this approach. They are pushing Old Gold sales up, up, up... month after month.

With this public encouragement... we shall keep on reminding smokers that Old Gold cures just one thing...the world's best tobacco. And has but one aim—to give you a more enjoyable smoke, the product of nearly 200 years of tobacco "know-how."

Yes, to the editors of the JOURNAL OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION . . . and to smokers everywhere... we shall continue to say—

If you want a TREAT instead of a TREATMENT ...smoke

Widow of Slain Negro to Get Guard

Atlanta, Dec. 5 (AP).—Two officers will protect the widow of a slain Negro when she swears out murder warrants against three white men Monday, the head of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation said today.

Capt. Delmar Jones said he will send two State troopers to Savannah to accompany Mrs. Amy Mallard to Lyons, Ga., where her husband, Robert, was killed on a lonely country road November 20.

Five men were arrested yesterday on suspicion of murder, but two of them have been released, Toombs County Sheriff R. E. Gray said.

Being held in the county jail are J. Roderick Clifton, 36, William Lamar Howell, 32, and James Spivey, 24, Gray said. Herschel Sikes, 34, and Barney Sikes, 34, were released.

The men all denied any connection with Mallard's death.

The sheriff said he had rearrested two young Negroes and was holding them as material witnesses.

Postlude

Crowd Hears John Niles' Folk Songs

Washington's devotees of folk-song crowded the East Court of the National Gallery last night to hear John Jacob Niles present his versions of about 20 songs of the American people.

Although Mr. Niles' highly stylized delivery is often censured by the purists, it has played a large part in the recent revival of public interest in folk music. There are about as many ways of singing folk-songs as there are singers of them, and Niles' way is one of the most individual.

He occasionally makes excursions into the natural range of his voice, but usually keeps to a tense falsetto which gives a passionately lonely atmosphere even to the happier songs. When high and soft, his voice sems to come from some distant hillside, tempered and almost obliterated by the wind.

Providing himself with simple dulcimer accompaniments, he sang love songs, Christmas carols, and ballads. "Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair," "Go 'way from My Window," and 'I Wonder as I Wander" are probably his most famous songs and he sang all of them last night.

Paul Moor's Recital

Paul Moor, pianist, gave a recital of twentieth century music yesterday afternoon at the Phillips Gallery.

The works he selected, all fairly well established pieces, were the Bartok Sonatina, "The Alcotts" from "Concord" Sonata by Ives, the Hindemith Third Sonata, the Copland Piano Variations, and Ravel's "Gaspard de la Nuit."

Many performers play modern music with an air of "I don't understand this stuff any better than you do, but I didn't write it, so don't blame me." This was anything but the case with Moor. He played as if he really understood what the composer meant, and wanted to put that meaning over to the listener.

The most outstanding feature of his performance was his continuous attention to the basic rhythm of the music and to the shape of the phrases. The passage work was often obscured by a too lavish use of the pedal, particularly in the Bartok and Ravel compositions.

It is always a pleasure to hear a piano recital of unhackneyed pieces and yesterday's program held the attention of the listener from beginning to end.

Police Kept Busy By Unconscious Men in Room 108

Atlanta, Dec. 5 (AP).—"Man unconscious in Room 108!"

Three times recently police have received the same report from an Atlanta hotel.

The first time, a maid found a man sprawling across a bed. He was released after a few days in the hospital.

The next day, police broke into the room when a hotel clerk said the occupant failed to respond to knocks. A second man was found. Doctors said he might have suffered a slight stroke.

Yesterday, police entered the room again and found two men. Both unconscious. When they were revived, they said they didn't know what had happened.

Police said no money had been taken and "we can't find anything in the room to suggest how anyone might be injured.

Veterans Hear Proposal for Adjusted Bonus to Equalize GI Bill Rights

Equalization of the GI Bill of Rights so all overseas veterans would receive equivalent benefits was proposed yesterday by Omar B. Ketchum, national legislative director of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Ketchum spoke before some 400 veterans in the Silver Spring, Md., Armory during what was said to be the largest VFW initiation ever held in Montgomery County.

Approximately 200 new members were taken into 10 VFW posts in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties during the mass ceremony.

Declaring only 35 per cent of World War II veterans have benefited by the GI Bill of Rights, Ketchum called for an "adjusted bonus" which would give "equivalent" monetary benefits to veterans who do not take the educational, business loan, home loan and other benefits listed in the present GI bill.

The VFW official expressed confidence that some such adjustment system "eventually" would be adopted.

Paul C. Wolman of Baltimore, past national VFW commander and another speaker at the initiation ceremony, urged veterans to take an active part in efforts to preserve the peace for which they fought. Ward C. Caddington, commander of VFW District No. 2, presided.

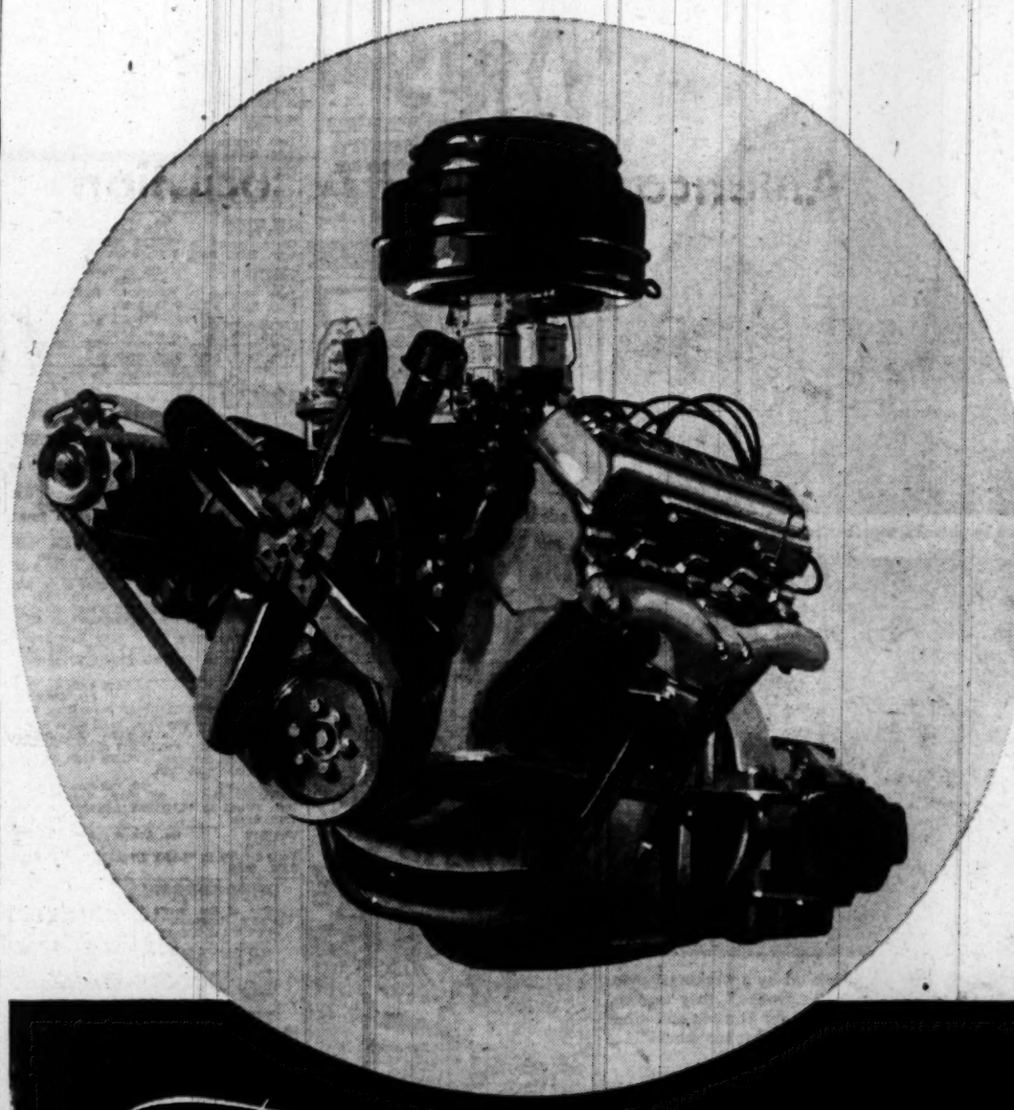
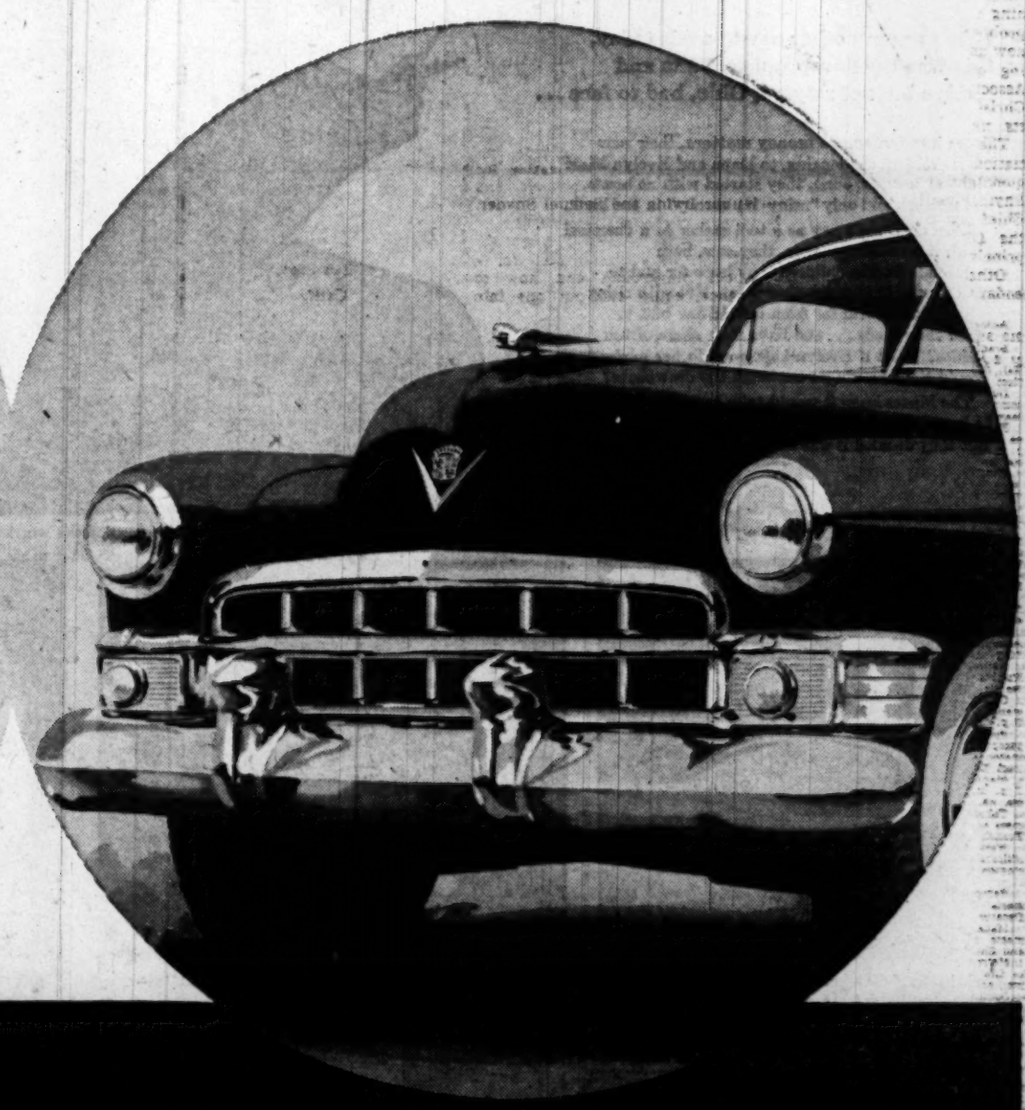
Cadillac

PRESENTS ITS CREATIVE MASTERPIECE...





...The world's newest engine—for the world's finest car!

White Sidewall Tires available at additional cost.

No Cadillac announcement has ever been more significant than the one which appears on this page. For, this year, Cadillac presents its creative masterpiece—a wholly new V-type, eight-cylinder engine—which is, beyond all doubt, the highest development yet attained in automotive power plants. ★ Drawing on the experience gained in thirty-five years of pioneering with V-type power, Cadillac has produced a sensational engine—one eminently befitting the world's foremost producer of fine motor cars. ★ This great power plant has been twelve years in the building—for basic development work started in 1936. It has many unusual qualities which set it apart from all other creations of its kind. It is far more alert, powerful and responsive to the throttle—yet it affords an increase in gasoline economy of approximately twenty per cent. And the manner of its performance actually challenges the imagination. It is liquid smooth; it is quick and eager beyond all experience; yet the power application is so effortless that the driver is scarcely aware of the engine's existence. The car seems almost to move by automatic propulsion. ★ Even experienced Cadillac owners must put aside all previous conceptions of performance when they drive the 1949 Cadillac, with this amazing new engine. It is a revelation—from silken start to silken stop. ★ There are, of course, many other advancements in the new Cadillac in addition to its history-making engine. There is new beauty in the front ensemble; there is a newly-designed, more attractive instrument panel, with all driving controls at your finger tips; and throughout the chassis and body will be found those characteristic refinements which result from Cadillac's unceasing search for perfection. ★ But the big Cadillac story, for 1949, is performance. It is not only the world's new standard—it is beyond the world's current conception.

Trans-Lux Turns To Feature Films

By Richard L. Coe

CHRISTMAS DAY will bring another first-run downtown movie house. The Trans-Lux is switching its newsreel policy and from then on will present feature films.

To give the new move added zing will be Sam Goldwyn's latest, "Enchantment," which on that day will be having its "world premiere" at top theaters across the country. This is adapted from the novel by Rumer Godden and stars David Niven, Teresa Wright, Evelyn Keyes and Farley Granger under the direction of Irving Reis.

This brings the town's first-run movie theaters to a total of 12. Strictly speaking, of course, revivals and what the trade calls "reissues" inhabit at least four of them from time to time. It's a sizable total, though, and raises once again the question of where the product for all these first-run theaters will come from.

Out to pick pictures for the Trans-Lux is Norman Elson, vice president and general manager of the Trans-Lux firm. Some of the chain's other houses in the north follow this feature-film policy and Elson vows he'll corral some good ones for the 14th st. house.

For all Elson's cheerful outlook, though, a lot of Washingtonians are going to miss dropping in for the news at the Trans-Lux. A good many folk I know don't enjoy the average movie fare, but drop in regularly for the fulsome news shots at the Trans-Lux. Since this is a preeminently news-conscious city, I've an idea the old policy will be missed.

Theater Seats 600

For those customers, the management promises to continue its newsreel digests and promises there'll still be a strong accent on factual reporting.

This will come as something of a surprise, for our town has gotten to take its Trans-Lux for granted. The 600-seat house opened March 13, 1937, in a special performance sponsored by the American Newspaper Women's Club. Since then it's piled up all sorts of interesting records and beats, with its fight and sports coverage always sure magnates.

Good news, though, is the fact that its popular manager, Roland Robbins, will be staying on in that capacity. Mr. Robbins, whose looks belie the fact, managed Keith's in the days when President Wilson used to relax from his many tribulations there. Genial Roland takes pride in remembering the days when he played host to the Wilsons and not long ago Mrs. Wilson asked me to remember her to him. He's managed the Trans-Lux since its opening and the place wouldn't be right without him.

The new policy, too, will give added zest to the assistant manager, Vincent Iorio, whose designs, lettering and placards in front of the theater are familiar to all us patrons of the Capital Transit Co. You can look for even more splendiferous displays from the active Iorio, whose telephonic energies have bent many an ear.

"ANGEL STREET" finds the King Smith Theater, that intimate little nook in the courtyard of 2118 Massachusetts ave., employing its odd little stage to fullest advantage . . . Director Robert Rence has set this Victorian thriller most effectively and seated in the tiny hall you'll feel you're right in there with the terrified Bella Manningham . . . Meg Stalings does very well by this role Ingrid Bergman did so handsomely on the screen; her companions aren't so effective . . . Mr. Rence suggests his sinister intentions a trifle too soon and Lucian Scott flaps far too anxiously as that able Detective Rough . . . The play will continue through Tuesday night the 14th, Sunday the 12th excepted.

JAILBREAK FROM LIFE: Scott Brady and Robert Kellard in "Canon City," the Eagle-Lion report on a real-life break staged two years ago in the Colorado State Penitentiary which arrives on the Warner screen Thursday morning

AIDING THE Junior Police and Citizens' Corps drive to prevent juvenile delinquency, a three-hour show is plotted for Uline Arena Thursday night, with WOL's popular Mike Hunnicutt as emcee . . . Nan Garcia, Charles Keaton, Del Ludwig and the Pentagon Choral Society are some of the night's attractions and don't be surprised if Pearl Bailey and Lionel Hampton also show up . . . Paul D. Palmer is producing the show; tickets at Mrs. Stabler's desks at 1616 K st. and 1300 G st., Lubar's . . . More dope from Republic 7307 and National 6750.

PETER LIND HAYES, that merry fellow of the Statler's Embassy Room, will drop in at Hecht's record department this afternoon at 4 to chat with the folks about those children's records of his . . . Could be he'll even give with his bright mimicry that makes the kids go for his discs.

THEATER GUILD subscribers tonight began their Baltimore series, trekking over to Ford's for John Van Druten's new comedy; "Make Way for Lucia," which froth he has extracted from those popular "Lucia" stories of the urbane E. F. Benson . . . London's comedienne, Isabel Jeans, has title role, with Cyril Ritchard playing opposite.

TONIGHT brings that "Midsummer Night's Dream" as produced for the school children in this area by Productions Incorporated . . . The Universalist Church auditorium, 16th and S sts. is the scene of the play at 8:30.

Foreigners Buy Fewer U. S. Films

By The Associated Press

United States movie makers' receipts from foreign showings of their films will drop off to about 100 million dollars this year, the Commerce Department predicted last night.

That's a drop of 24 million dollars from 1947, and 38 million dollars from 1946—and helps explain why Hollywood producers are singing the business blues, and talking cost cutting.

Britain, giving the United States moviemen the heaviest blow, will turn in only about 35 million dollars in royalties on United States film showings, against 56 million dollars last year, and 70 million dollars in 1946.

Receipts from Britain dropped after the British slapped an increased import duty on foreign films in August, 1947.

However, the film makers resumed shipping their products to Britain last March after a United States-British agreement was reached on the duty question.

Should a Bride keep her job?

Like so many other newly-weds today, this was the first problem Dana and Evelyn Mox of Dayton, Ohio, had to face . . .

From honeymoon to money matters, their new life is exciting, challenging, to Dana and Evelyn Mox! Married just last June, they started with no house, no furniture, and only "rainy-day money" in the bank.

Even on Dana's pay as a tool maker in a chemical plant, it wouldn't be easy, they saw, both to provide for the children they hope for and to plan for the kind of life they want. Not with rising prices and a world far from calm! How best to reach their goals . . . and have their share of fun besides? What if Evelyn kept on with her job? Would the advantages outweigh the drawbacks?

The Moxes knew it would take careful management to have a happy home life if she kept her job too. But they decided it was well worth a try . . .

AMERICAN FAMILY CLOSE-UP
As they go, so goes the nation!

Dana and Evelyn know any family has more happiness, fewer worries by planning together, managing money together!

They work in the plant where they met, have same hours, drive to work together. As secretary to purchasing agent, she adds $165 a month to Dana's $279 "take-home" pay. But her job means higher taxes; extra clothes, lunches.

Shopping's harder for a working wife. Evelyn must market after work or Saturdays. But deciding menus together and finding what bargains they can is fun! Including lunches at the plant, food costs them $22.50 a week.

Time for fun is doubly appreciated by a working couple. "By planning fixed expenses in advance," they explain, "we know just what we can afford for bowling and other things. So we don't worry about spending too much!"

Dana shares the chores because of Evelyn's all-day job. Shampooing rug was his initiation into housekeeping! Even the washing machine holds no mysteries for Mr. Mox!

Now they have definite goals for the $90 a month they hope to save by both working! As to furniture, for example, the newly-weds are learning to know what they both like by visiting the stores together. By starting out in a $65-a-month furnished apartment, they gave themselves time to decide just what kind of house they want, too.

Even before they married, they worked out their life insurance plans! Already the have two retirement income life insurance policies that will total $13,725 at age 65. They're planning with their agent for mor As a fixed monthly item, they put $31.86 towards their present life insurance protection. "We know the kind of future we want," the Moxes will tell you, "and we're finding it fun to work as a team and stick to our budget to get a good start!"

A second honeymoon like their first in Florida is in the Moxes' "Someday Book." They're digging in now to make all their dreams come true sooner!

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

BRING YOU THIS STORY BECAUSE... families like the Moxes show us one way that happiness is earned! You, yourself, probably know a family, right in your own town, that is getting ahead in the same typically American way. Such families prove to all of us that we can solve our own problems by our own efforts. . . . Their example shows too why it is so important for us to hold to our rights to think for ourselves, to work at what we like, to live as we choose. For what this country amounts to depends upon what happens to its homes!

Rams Belt Skins, 41 to 13; Waterfield Hurls 4 Touchdowns; Colts Beat Bills to Tie for Title, 35 to 15; Playoff Next Week

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Dec. 5.—The Los Angeles Rams, owned by Dan Reeves and Edwin Pauley, take the field against the Redskins, owned—and directed—by George Marshall, author of the Season Ticket Plan. A crowd of 32,970 fans with a Dun and Bradstreet rating of at least $3.30, is present

POVICH

The game will start any minute now, with everything in readiness and the inter-com working in the Redskins' upstairs-coaching department. The Rams are using the Shaugnessy T-formation and the Redskins are sticking to their A. T. & T. system.

After the opening kick-off, Baugh finds an eligible receiver for one of his passes and completes it to Dick Hoerner, of the University of Iowa and the Rams, at midfield. Sammy wishes he had that one back.

Tom Fears makes a smart catch of a Bob Waterfield pass, and the Rams have a first down on the Redskins' 20. And the Redskins wish it were true that they have nothing to fear but Fears.

7-0, Rams. Hoerner is apparently playing no favorites and is impartial about the whole business of catching footballs. After grabbing the pass from Baugh to get the ball for the Rams, he grabbed one from Waterfield to get a soft-touch touchdown.

THE RAMS have the ball again, but Waterfield misses with a pass to Kenny Washington. Kenny was in the clear when he dropped the ball. It was a bad pass—hit him in the palms of both hands.

Deep in their own territory, the Redskins try to get fancy and don't quite know how. Saenz takes a wide pitch-out from Baugh and fumbles. Ram-bunctious Ed Champagne, apparently heady with opportunism, falls on it. The Redskins are uniformed in burgundy, but they ain't sparkling at this point.

13-0, RAMS. Jack Zilly of Notre Dame gets into the act after loitering in the end zone until a Waterfield pass came his way. Apparently well-coached, he caught it for a touchdown, which was not quite as surprising as the fact that Waterfield's kick for the extra point was blocked.

20-0, Rams. Tom Hardy, a persistent cuss, quarter-backed the Rams to that one. After Kenny Washington rocked the Redskins for a 15-yard gain up the middle, Hardy pitched a pass to Hickey in the end zone, but it was disallowed for holding. So from the Redskins' 30, he pitched one to Washington who scored in his soliitude.

Despite the 20-0 lead in the second quarter, there's no disposition to rate the Rams with the Bears. It took 'em 22 minutes to roll up that score against the 'Skins, with the Bears doing it in four minutes last week at Chicago.

The Redskins are now on the move, particularly Jim Castiglia, who took the kickoff 30 yards and then whacks out a first down on the Rams' seven. The element of surprise helped push the Rams back. A Redskin running attack is practically a trick play.

Touchdown, Redskins. Baugh found Dick Todd doing practically nothing on the Rams' two-yard line and gave him something to keep him occupied—a bullet pass that put six points on the scoreboard.

Denote the passing of 17 seconds any way you like, but the Rams have that touchdown back. It could be called a pique performance by the Rams who were apparently miffed by that Redskin touchdown. Anyway, Fred Gehrke took the next kickoff on his own 8-yard line and went as far as he could—92 yards, to be exact.

With two minutes of the half remaining, the Redskins act as if they've determined to protect their 27-7 deficit, sending two time-eating plays into the middle of the Rams' line.

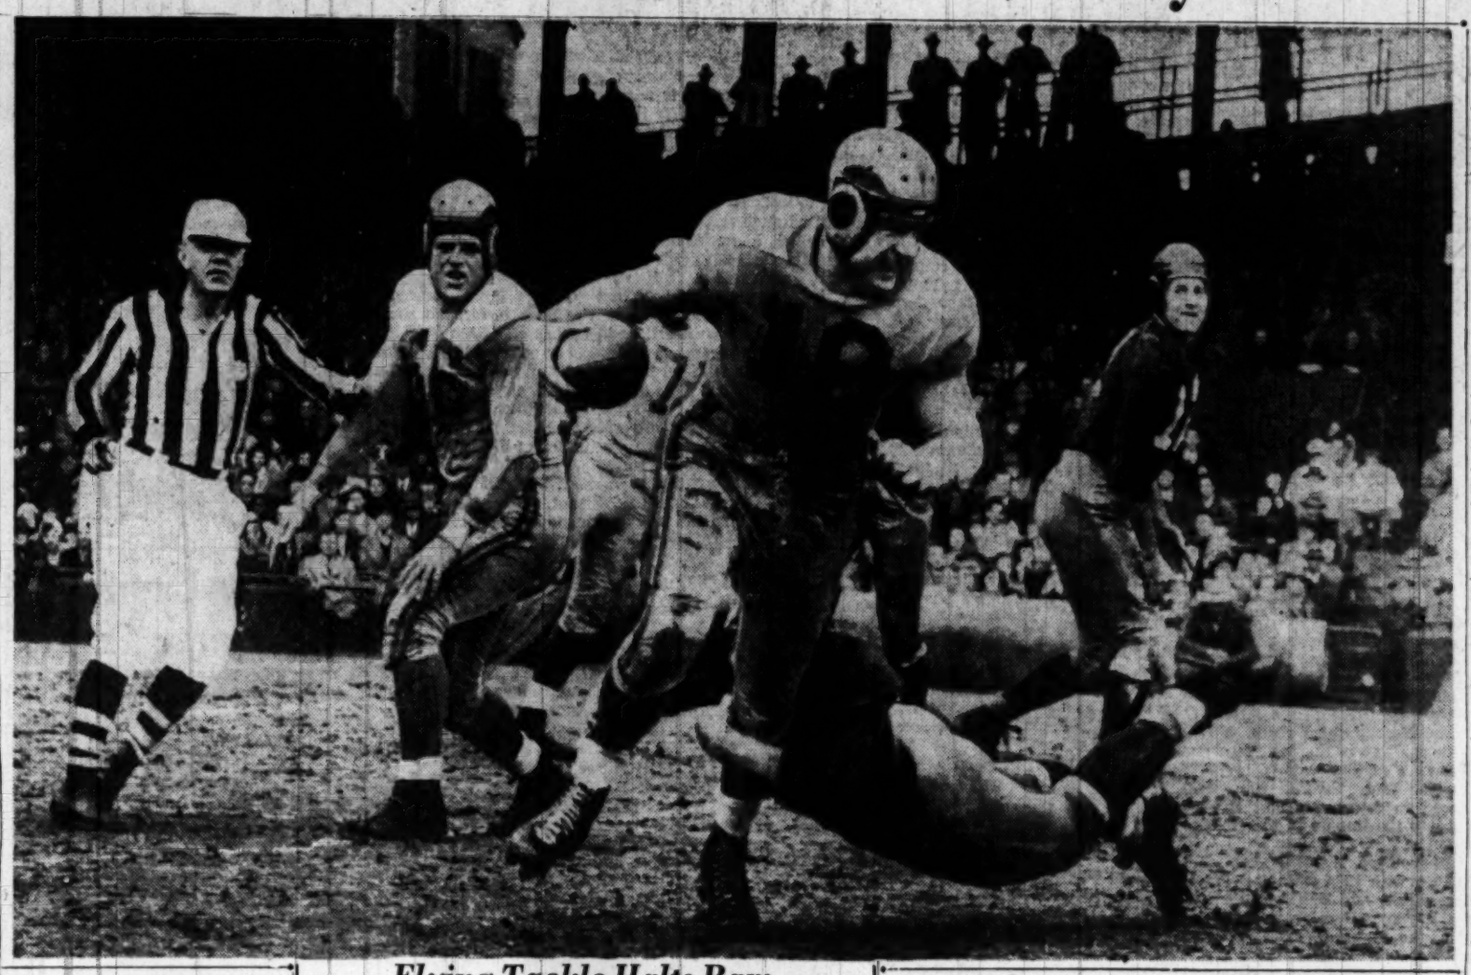
34-7, Rams. Gehrke launched that one with a 20-yard end run, and then took a 34-yard pass to the Redskins' ten. Waterfield finally rewarded him with a touchdown pitch in the end zone.

41-7, RAMS. It was another Bob Waterfield Production, and nice casting. He made a 36-yard cast to Fears for a first down on the Redskins' five, and then rustled up a touchdown pitch to Bob Hoffman who was quite unattended.

Touchdown, Redskins. Hugh Taylor and Steve Bagarus take the Redskins into scoring territory with Baugh's short passes, and a 32-yarder to Taylor takes it over. Taylor rams into the goal post as he makes the catch but holds the ball, and they cut the Rams' lead to 41-13.

The scoreboard shows 28 seconds to play with the Redskins on their own one-foot line, needing 51 yards for first down after Youel was twice smeared for losses. The Rams ought to win this one.

Two hours ago, you could have had the Redskins and seven points. Right now, to quote the unlucky bettors, you can have the Redskins, period.



Gehrke Runs Kickoff 92 Yds.; Taylor Spectacular

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Clark Shaughnessy, who spent five years teaching the Redskins the T-formation, gave his former charges a thorough demonstratio nfo how it should work yesterday as his Los Angeles Rams pounded out a 41-13 victory at Griffith Stadium.

Despite the loss, Washington's National Football League representatives clinched second place in the Eastern Division when the Pittsburgh romped over the New York Giants.

There were 32,970 paying customers in the stands for what might rank as the Redskins' most futile effort of the season. They must have agreed that except for Shaughnessy's mercy in holding out his stars in the last period, the debacle might have been twice as bad.

An indication of the awfulness of Washington's play can be taken from the Skins' situation at the final gun. It was third down and 50 yards to go for the hosts, with the ball on the 1-yard line. Their own, that is.

Waterfield Tosses Four Scores

In dropping their first of six regular season games with the Rams, the Redskins were never a very serious threat after the first 10 minutes. Bob Waterfield passed 'em crazy, getting off four touchdown passes, to Dick Hoerner, Gil Bouley, Fred Gehrke and Bob Hoffman in that order.

For variety's sake, if nothing else, Jim Hardy pitched another touchdown pass to Kenny Washington and Gehrke raced 92 yards with a kickoff for a score. Waterfield made good on five of his six placements for extra points.

Waterfield, UCLA's rightful claim to fame, completed 9 out of 14 passes and Hardy was good for 4 out of 7. Between them they licked the platter for 196 yards.

The Redskins' thumb-in-the-dike consisted of lonesome touchdowns in the second and third period. Slingin' Sammy Baugh, who ran for his life most of the afternoon, launched both Washington scores as he hurled first at Roommate Dick Todd and then at Hugh Taylor.

Baugh was busy enough and he completed enough passes—21 out of 33 for 188 yards—but most of his slants were hurried and to receivers the Rams were covering tent-like.

It was Taylor's touchdown which featured the game as far as Washington's die-hard fans were concerned. The Skins were already behind, 41-7, as the immediate result of Waterfield's slants to Gehrke and Hoffman for 4 and 7 yards, respectively, as the third period opened.

They started on their own 20, after Finlay's kickoff hit the goal post, and moved in painfully slow motion down field. Ten Baugh passes, eight of them good, plus Jim Castiglia's three smashes at the line carried to the Los Angeles 32.

It was third down when Baugh faded and found Taylor cutting toward the right goal post. The stringy Oklahoma City University end wrapped up the ball at about the three and crashed headlong into the upright. He went down, but across the goal, and the ball was still clutched to his chest when he was helped up.

That closed out the scoring on a pleasant note, for every Redskin except the bruised Taylor, but

Cards Smash Green Bay By 42 to 7

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Chicago Cardinals, climaxing a battle in the mud with three touchdowns in the final period, smashed the Green Bay Packers 42-7 today while their place-kicking star, Pat Harder, may have set a league record.

The Cardinals won their 10th victory in starts before 26,072 Comiskey Park fans.

The National League champions thus move into their all-important clash with the Chicago Bears in Wrigley Field next Sunday with the Western Division crown going to the winner.

Harder today booted extra points after each of the six Card touchdowns to run his string of consecutive conversions to 75 including 50 this season. Harder's mark was disclosed after a check of only the Cardinal records. Official National Football League records were not immediately available. The previous all-time mark of successive conversions was 72, set by Jack Manders of the Bears in 1933-1937.

The game was only two minutes old when Ray Mallouf tossed a 12-yard scoring pass to Mal Kutner to cap a 41-yard drive stemming from a recovered fumble. The ball squirted from Ted Fritsch's arms and Hamilton Nichols pounced on it.

The Packers tied it, 7-7, at the end of the first quarter as Buford Ray captured Mallouf's bobble and raced 40 yards to the Cardinal 17. From there, the Packers went over in five plays, payoff honors going to Walt Schlinkman from the 2. Fritsch kicked the point.

Charlie Trippi herded the Cardinals on a 56-yard touchdown push at the outset of the second period. Paul Christman sneaked across from the 1.

In the third, Trippi, Elmer Angsman and Harder slid through the ooze on a 44-yard drive which Harder climaxed with a 1-foot jab.

The Cardinals really uncorked their explosiveness in the finale. Christman connected on a 61-yard scoring play to Kutner. Later Mallouf wriggled over from the 2 after the props were laid when Perry Moss' fumble was taken by Jake Colhouer on the Packer 41. Big Jake lumbered 25 yards then lateralled to Bill Blackburn who romped 19 more before being bulldogged.

Three minutes later Jug Girard's fumble was grabbed by the Cards to set up Vic Schmall's 18-yard scoring gallop.

Lowly Yanks Surprise Eagles, By Rolling to 37-14 Victory

Boston, Dec. 5 (AP).—Boston's lowly Yanks today wound up their National Football League season in a blaze of glory, winning 37-14, to break a six-game losing streak at the expense of the Philadelphia Eagles, Eastern Division champions.

During their luckless streak, the Yanks took a 45-0 drubbing from the Eagles in Philadelphia. Only 9053 were on hand for the game.

While running up the highest score made against the Eagles in their 11 games this season, the Yanks tallied twice on pass interceptions.

Winger Bill Chipley raced 40 yards into the Eagles' end zone with one of Bill MacBride's aerials and Joe Golding picked his way for 89 yards after pulling down one of Tommy Thompson's, just before the first half ended.

After receiving the opening kickoff, Ernie Steele took off for 60 yards to the Yanks' 22. Then Thompson hurled a touchdown pass to Jack Ferrante and Cliff Patton place-kicked the first of his two conversions.

But the Yanks bounced back immediately and Frank Muehheuser inspired them to their great scoring heights with a 35-yard drive through center for the initial Boston touchdown.

Nick Scollard provided the extra point and the next time the Yanks drove into Philadelphia, he booted them into a 10-7 lead with a 35-yard placement field goal.

Before Chipley and Golding scored with their second-period interceptions, Phil Slosburg more than sewed up the Yanks' third win in their 12 starts by fading back to his 25 and hurling a pass that Frank Seno caught on the Eagles' 35 before galloping into their end zone.

The Eagles tried 46 passes and one of the most important of their 17 completions was a 45-yard toss by Thompson that drew a favorable interference ruling. It set the stage for his 18-yard toss to Joe Muha for the other Philadelphia touchdown, which reduced the Yanks' lead to 24-14.

With only three minutes left, the Eagles elected to gamble and lost the ball on downs on their 16, from where Frank Nelson passed to Johnny Poto to set the stage for Rudy Romboli's one-foot scoring slam.

The Eagles played without Steve Van Buren.

Dizzy and Daffy Back in Business; They Buy Club

Clovis, N. Mex., Dec. 5 (AP).—The Dean brothers, former big league pitchers, today bought the Clovis Pioneers Baseball Club of the Class C West Texas-New Mexico League.

Jerome Herman (Dizzy) and Paul (Daffy) Dean took over the club from the Clovis Sports Association.

The price was taking over of club indebtedness estimated by the association at $17,000.

The brothers announced Paul Dean would be manager

Moore, Amos Fight Tonight

Archie Moore, hardy perennial in the light heavyweight division, comes out from under a 30-day NBA suspension tonight to test the talents of youn, Bob Amos in the 10-round event at Turner's Arena.

Several weeks ago at Turner's, Moore lost a fight to Lloyd Gibson and also the right to box under NBA auspices for a month after several "unintentional and unavoidable" low blows.

Moore, always high up on the list when matchmakers discuss opponents for division champion Freddie Mills, has to slap Amos down authoritatively tonight to keep himself eligible for the big time. His fine record of victories over Jimmy Bivins, Curtis Sheppard, and Holman Williams has worn slightly thin since l'affaire Gibson.

For Amos it's been a rapid climb up the ladder. The 21-year-old Detroiter has dropped only 1 in 39 fights and the bookies have shown their considerable respect for him by making him a mere 6-5 underdog to the experienced, power-laden Moore.

In supporting bouts, "Sonny Boy" Bunn faces Jesse Baker, Jackie Ford meets "Slugger" White and Roy Wirt punches with Grantham Jones in five-rounders, and Walter Parks trades with Rufus Berry in the opening four-rounder at 8:45 p. m.

Tittle Scores Twice, Hurls Colt Touchdown

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Dec. 5.—Buffalo scored first, but Baltimore scored the most and rapped the Bills, 35 to 15, here today to tie the Bills for the All-America Conference's Eastern Division title in the final game of the regular season.

The same two clubs will play here again next Sunday for the Eastern title with the winner gaining the dubious privilege of battling the powerful Cleveland Browns for the league championship, December 19.

Y. A. Tittle freshman passing whiz from Louisiana State University, and Lamar (Race Horse) Davis, one of the few holdovers from last year's wretched Colt team, made the afternoon miserable for the New Yorkers, but most enjoyable for 33,090 who turned out to root the Colts home.

Tittle, chief difference in the club which this year broke even in 14 engagements after winning only two last year, scored two touchdowns himself, passed for a third and set up a fourth with another pass.

Davis Scores Twice

Davis, a swift running, glue-fingered end, hauled in a Tittle pitch to score on an 80-yard pass play and also intercepted a George Ratterman chuck and returned it 39 yards to fashion another Colt touchdown.

Rex Grossman, the Colts extra point kicker deluxe, kicked all five extra points, running his string to 43 without a miss. He almost made good on two field goals, one from 47 yards and the other from 40.

Chet Mutryn returned the opening kickoff 40 yards to the Buffalo 45. With Tomasetti carrying five times, the Bills worked the ball to the Colt 1-foot-line in nine plays and Mutryn scored. Bill Steffik's placement was wide and Buffalo led 6-0.

Baltimore marched from its own 42 to the Buffalo 10 and Billy Hillenbrand carried the last 10. Grossman's conversion then made it Baltimore, 7-6, at the end of the first quarter.

Three Tittle chucks, two of them going to Davis, plus a 12-yard sprint by Stormy Pfohl, moved the Colts to the Buffalo 1-foot line early in the second period. Tittle took it over on a sneak for Baltimore's second touchdown.

Seconds later, Tittle's end zone pass was batted down and Buffalo awarded an automatic safety and the Colts retired to their dressing

Before Detroit's Biggest Crowd

Bears Wallop Lions, 42-14; Luckman Tosses 3 Touchdowns

Detroit, Dec. 5 (AP).—Sid Luckman threw three touchdown passes as the Chicago Bears, turning on the power when they wanted to whipped the Detroit Lions, 42 to 14, here today for their sixth straight National Football League victory.

Detroit's biggest crowd of the season—27,485 fans—saw the Bears score three touchdowns in the last 9 minutes of the game.

It was the Bears' tenth triumph in 11 NFL games and kept them tied for the Western Division lead with the Chicago Cards, whom they play next Sunday. For Detroit, entrenched in last place, it was the ninth defeat in 11 starts this season.

Luckman, who completed 20 out of 27 passes for 181 yards and ran his touchdown pitching total to 13 for the season, hit End Jim Keane and Halfback Noah Mullins with short scoring aerials in the first half, while the Bears were piling up a 21-0 lead, and pitched 13 yards to End Ed Sprinkle for another score near the finish.

Frank Minini, George McAfee and J. R. Boone scored the other three Chicago touchdowns, all on thrusts from inside the Detroit 3-yard line and Johnny Lujack booted all six points after touchdown to run his season total to 41 out of 43 attempts.

The Lions didn't advance the ball past mdfield in the first half as they fell three touchdowns behind, but they marched 78 yards in 16 plays the first time they got the ball after halftime, and scored on Clyde LeForce's 24-yard fourth down pass to End Bob Mann.

Detroit got the next touchdown, in the first minute of the final period, when Fred Enke passed 20 yards to End Johnny Greene. Merv Pregulman's second straight conversion shaved the Bears' lead to 21-14.

Notre Dame's Tripucka Suffers Six Fractures

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (AP).—Physicians attending Frank Tripucka, Notre Dame first-string quarterback, said today he suffered six minor fractures in yesterday's 14-14 tie game with Southern California but "there is no danger of a permanent injury."

Tripucka, from Bloomfield, N. J., probably will remain in Good Samaritan hospital a few days, then be flown to South Bend, Ind. He was hurt on the last play of the first half and carried from the field.

The doctors said he suffered one rib fracture, two chip fractures of the vertebrae and three fractured transverse processes.

The 20-year-old quarterback was injured on the last play of he first half. He was carried off the field in a stretcher

After the Irish had stopped a USC touchdown drive in the shadow of their own goal posts, the Bloomfield, N. J., lad called himself to carry the ball on four plays into the Trojan line. It was an obvious effort to freeze the ball and the quarterback's strategy worked but on the final carry, a host of Trojans swarmed over him. The Irish left the field leading 7 to 0, but Tripucka is quite still. A senior, it was his last game.

Hamilton Here Today for Talk

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 5 (AP).—Capt. Tom Hamilton, weighing an offer to head Pitt's athletic program, goes to Washington tomorrow for another talk with his Navy superiors and there is considerable speculation they will offer him a long term stay at the academy.

Hamilton himself hinted something of the nature was in the wind by saying "Im satisfied now that my life is in athletics, either at the academy or at Pitt."

Brooklyn Rallies After Trailing 31-0

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 5 (AP).—Cleveland's mighty Browns became the first team in the All-America Football Conference's brief three-year existence to complete an unbeaten campaign, defeating the Brooklyn Dodgers, 31-21.

It was the Browns' fourteenth consecutive victory of the season, and their seventeenth in a row over a two-year span.

A paid Ebbets Field crowd of 9821 watched Otto Graham, Marion Motley and Company build up a 31-0 lead, then rooted itself hoarse as the Dodgers bounced back to tally three touchdowns against the Western divisional champions' second-and third-stringers.

The Brooks' third score, which came midway in the final quarter, threw a scare into Cleveland Coach Paul Brown, who was forced to return his first stringers into the line-up in the closing minutes.

As expected, it was Graham and Motley, with help from the Jones boys, Edgar and Dub, who carried the Browns' offensive load. Graham, the forward passer par excellence, tossed two touchdowns and scored another. Dub Jones accounted for the fourth TD on a sweep around his own left end from the 1. One of Graham's scoring passes was a 54-yarder to End Dante Lavelli in the second period. The other was a 24-yard third-period heave to End Horace Gillom.

Star of a losing cause for the Dodgers was Bob Chappuis, the former All-America back from Michigan. Chappuis, recovered from a leg injury which kept him out of last week's game, connected with 14 passes in 29 attempts for 318 yards.

He pitched two touchdown passes and set up the other. Bob connected with Bob Hoernschemeyer for 37 yards and a touchdown in the third period, and followed up with a brilliant 61-yard pass play to Monk Gafford in the final stanza. Another 53-yard heave to Mickey Colmer paved the way for Hoerneschmeyer's 4-yard pay-off plunge for the Brooks' final tally.

Skins Walloped Again, 41 to 13, by Rams

only because a Ram march of 76 yards, achieved by subs, fizzled on the Redskin 2-yard line in the final quarter. Joe Corn fumbled and Sandifer saved the 'Skins some embarrassment by recovering.

Jimmy Youel came in shortly thereafter, replacing Baugh, and made like a locomotive in reverse. There was no truth to the rumor his blockers had already gone to the showers, but Jimmy's passing efforts didn't exactly click. He lost exactly 40 yards on two straight attempts to pass and when the final gun ended Redskin suffering the Rams were just 1 yard short of a safety.

It took the Rams 12 minutes to generate their first touchdown, but once they got the hang of it they did quite well. The Redskins were helpful, too, making a couple of miscues that spotted Los Angeles a 13-0 lead before the game was 20 minutes old.

First it was Hoerner's interception of Baugh's pass that started L. A. goalward. The ball wobbled lazily, Baugh's arm having been hit as he tossed, and Hoerner was brought down at the Redskin 47.

Kenny Washington got in a 17-yard dash and there was a 10-yard Waterfield-to-Fears aerial before the Rams scored from the 17. Waterfield waited, dropped a nice one in Hoerner's arms at the 10 and the big fullback was over handily.

The Rams next offensive fizzled rather tiredly and they gratefully accepted assistance from their opponents. The 'Skins were trying a handoff, Baugh to Saenz, when the ball flipped loose and wound up in the midsection of L. A.'s Ed Champagne on the Redskin 16.

Two plays later, after Kenny Washington was stopped cold, Waterfield heaved one at Bouley as the Boston College wingman tore across the end zone. Officials declared the catch was out of bounds, then changed their minds and the Rams led, 13-0, after Hartley blocked Waterfield's placement.

Todd Scores on Pass

Slightly more effort was needed for Ram touchdown No. 3. It took a 49-yard advance that could hardly be called a sustained drive because the last 26 yards were gobbled up with one swift Hardy-to-Washington pass that caught the 'Skins' Cheverko flat-footed.

Then the Redskins functioned, finally. Jim Castiglia ran a short kickoff to the Tribe 48 and Baugh and Castiglia combined from there. Baugh whipped one pass that Todd miraculously caught for a 24-yard gain. Another went to McKee for 10. Castiglia was good for 17 yards on two tries, reaching the L. A. seven.

It was Baugh's turn and he came through with a nice peg to Todd Nobody was near Dick as he stepped one yard across the goal.

Washington trailed by only 20-7 at that point, but 17 seconds later there was still a 20-point difference in the teams. The quick-change artist in this case was Gehrke, who cuddled up to Jim Peebles' next kickoff on his own eight and went all the way.

Gehrke broke through the entire Redskin force at about the 30, leaving only Dan Sandifer in the safety position to stop him. Sandifer had to come in at an angle, and he closed a little space, but his last-ditch dive at Gehrke's heels five yards from the goal slowed the flying Utah star not at all.

Waterfield's placement made it 27-7, and that was the half-time count. The game was over and nobody seemed to know it.

room with a 14-8 half-time advantage.

They made it 21-8 on the third play of the third quarter with the Tittle to Davs 80-yard concoction and that's the way it stood as the final period opened.

It didn't remain that way long, however, because Tittle and Davis still had a couple of touchdowns left in them. Davis started it by hauling in a Ratterman pass early in the quarter and running 39 yards to the Bills 1-foot line. There again Tittle sneaked over.

Repulsed three times inside the Colt 15, the Bills moved 87 yards, almost exclusively on Ratterman passes for their second and last touchdown. Ratterman completed the excursion by pegging 10 yards to End Al Baldwin for the score.

The Colts matched that one right quickly and once again it was Tittle who did it. He pegged 36 yards to John North, former Vandy end, who was brought down on the Bills' 16. Hillenbrand got 15 on one clip and Jake Leicht ended the parade by diving over from the 1-yard line.

Caps Launch 3-Game Trip

The Washington Caps take their unblemished 15-game record out to the unfriendly hinterlands where it will be attacked by three powerful Western Division quintets before the Caps return to Uline Arena next Saturday night.

The ordeal may have to be endured without the crucial help of Freddie Scolari, whose tender left angle went bum again in Saturday night's Bullet game. Trainer George Lentz will decide today whether or not Scolari will make the trip.

The road trip starts not too precariously with a game tomorrow night against the Jets in Lndianapolis. If the Caps survive it they'll try to tie their record streak of 17 straight wins Wednesday night against the Minneapolis Lakers who own the BAA's most potent scoring machine in towering George Mikan.

On Friday night, the Caps take part in one of those Chicago Stadium doubleheaders, opposed by last year's Western Division champs, the St. Louis Bombers. The Bombers accompany the Caps home for a tilt in Uline Arena the following night.

GW Tangles Tonight With N. C. State

Coach George Garber and his George Washington Colonials will find out where they stand in the Southern Conference quick-like tonight when they visit North Carolina State.

Coach Everett Case's Raleigh Wolfpack is reportedly eager, able, and favored to remain the champion in Conference basketball for another year. Case has the tallest team in Wolfpack history this year, chock full of last year's stars with the exception of Leo Katkaveck who graduated to the Washington Caps.

The Colonials, who have been tested only once and then indecisively by a much-weaker Quantico five, were second fiddle to the Wolfpack last year and in their second game of the season should find out whether they'll have to fill that same unenviable role again.

An intangible but respected obstacle for the Colonials tonight will be the fact that State hasn't lost in Raleigh in 23 games, or since Case took over the coaching job two years ago. So far this year State has divided a pair of games with Hanes Hosiery, an independent team from Winston-Salem.

Conerly Completes 36 of 53 Passes, But Giants Lose Out, 38 to 28

Steelers Show Too Much Power

Pittsburgh, Dec. 5 (AP).—The New York Giants' sensational freshman, Chuck Conerly, set a new passing record for the National Football League today but the Pittsburgh Steelers' power won the ball game, 38-28.

Conerly completed 36 passes in 53 attempts, including three for touchdowns, and his heaves accounted for a total of 363 yards. His achievement broke a record set December 1, 1940, by Davey O'Brien pitching for the Philadelphia Eagles against the Washington Redskins. O'Brien completed 33 out of 60 on that day.

End Bill Swiacki grabbed a 14-yard flip from Conerly for the completion which broke the record. Conerly then completed two more, the last to Swiacki for the Giants' last touchdown on the next to lay play of the game.

One of Charley's touchdown passes, in the third period to Gene Roberts, was thrown while he was flat on his back. Roberts threaded his way with this flat shot for 16 yards.

That effort, however, exploded the Steelers into the winning surge in which Pittsburgh ran up three touchdowns in three minutes of the fourth period with three different men scoring.

Joe Glamp booted all three points after touchdown in this sudden outburst. He added two more on earlier Steeler scores, scored one himself and booted a 40-year second-period field goal to lead the Pittsburgh scoring.

Halfback Ray Evans ran 9 yards in the first period to begin the Steeler scoring parade. The Giants, mainly on the strength of Conerly's passing, tied it up as Tony Minisi ran 7 yards for a touchdown to end an 81-yard march.

Fullback Jerry Shipkey boomed over from a yard and a half out for the first of these scores. George Papach's 42-yard run through the New York line set it up.

Tackle Carl Samueson intercepted a Conerly flip and ran 33 yards to the New York 7 to set up the second. Halfback Bob Cifers hit scoring dirt in two tries. The third Steeler touchdown was notched by Back Gonzales Morales who scooped up a fumble by Roberts and ran 36 yards.

Glamp's boot put the Steelers ahead to stay. Then Pittsburgh swiped a page from the Giants' passing book to engineer another second-period score on a 5-yard touchdown pass from Evans to Glamp.

Conerly's first fourth-period touchdown pass was an 11-yard heave to End Joe Johnson.

AAU Convention Awarded to D. C.

New York, Dec. 5.—The national convention of the A. A. U. today selected Washington, D. C., as the site for the sixty-second annual A. A. U. convention in 1950, the capital city's sesquicentennial year.

This action was taken in response to an invitation tendered by Eddie Rosenblum, president of the District of Columbia A. A. U.,

DOAK COMES TO TOWN—Doak Walker and girl friend, Norma Peterson, both of Dallas, paid a brief visit to Washington yesterday morning, along with 25 other Texans. Walker and party were en route to New York where Tuesday the SMU All-American will receive the Heisman award. The party stopped off at National Airport where they were greeted by Texas friends in Washington before continuing their journey to New York

'Biggest Thing Since Alamo'

Doak Walker Lost for Words In D. C. But Rooters Aren't

Doak Walker said he'd rather talk about oil and cotton, but the oil and cotton men who were shepherding him to New York, made it emphatic that they'd rather talk about Doak Walker.

"Why, he's just about the biggest thing that's happened to Texas since the Alamo," said Cotton Broker T. J. Hamilton of S.M.U.'s All-America halfback.

Hamilton was the cheer leader for a group of 25 Lone Star Staters who chartered a plane to accompany Walker to New York where Tuesday night the S.M.U. junior receives the Heisman award.

The party paused at National Airport at noon yesterday to refuel and exhibit the latest pride of Texas.

Walker is a shy, handsome 170-pounder. "We left Dallas at 5 o'clock this morning and I guess I'm a little sleepy," he said, "but even if I had a good night's sleep I'd be just as dull. I'm just not much at talking, I guess."

Walker's constituents, which included his comely girl friend, Norma Peterson, called themselves the Monday Morning Quarterbacks who were second-guessed by Doak every Saturday this year and darn glad of it.

While Walker said he was satisfied with the Cotton Bowl arrangements which pitted his Southwestern Conference championship Mustangs against Oregon, his traveling companions weren't.

"We wanted North Carolina, we asked North Carolina, but we didn't get North Carolina," they chanted. "They think Charlie Justice is the greatest player in the world and we know Doak is and wanted to prove it."

Car Credit Wins, 19 to 0

Car Credit, recently crowned kingpin of the Metro Football League's unlimited division, notched its thirty-fourth straight victory, 19-0, over Merrick Boys Club yesterday at Edgewood Playground.

All the scoring occurred in the second and third periods. Moe Zanger trekked 6 yards in the second period and Andy Hayden went over from 3 yards out later in the same quarter. George Nuemann Nuemann spun 12 yards for the final six-pointer in the third period.

Albert Leads 49ers Over Dons, 38-21

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (AP).—Field Marshal Frankie Albert and the San Francisco 49'ers whipped the Los Angeles Dons 38 to 21 and wrote some new records into the professional football book in the windup of the All-America Conference here today.

A throng of 51,460 fans witnessed the game. Coliseum official attendance figures show the Dons played to 286,317 fans in seven home games this season, compared with 300,924 for seven games last year.

Fireball Frankie sent the 49ers into a three-touchdown lead in the first quarter and they were never seriously threatened from then on.

Albert threw three touchdown passes, the longest good for 59 yards to Halfback Johnny Strzykalski, and ran his total scoring strikes for the season to 29. This eclipsed the pro football record established several seasons ago by Sid Luckman of the Chicago Bears, who completed 28.

Beals Snags Two

Albert's right end, Alyn Beals, caught two of the touchdown throws.

Tailback Glen Dobbs of the Dons matched Albert's touchdown pitching today, completing tosses for all three of his team's scores—two to huge Len Ford for 8 and 11 yards, and the last one in the final 10 seconds of the game to Fullback John Kimbrough.

A pass interception in midfield gave the 49ers the ball and in their first series of the game they went on to score. Joe Vetrano rambled 30-yards on a handoff from Albert for the first six points. Strzyalski's scoring play followed quickly, and a second pass interception set the 49ers off for the third time before the first period had ended. Beals capped it with a 7-yard pass from Albert.

Dobbs Leads Way

Dobbs, whose superd all-around play was the only bright feature of the Dons' finale, put the club in the game in the second period. They went 92 yards, and 72 of them were gained from the ex-Tulsa star's throwing. One pass went for 40 yards to Joe Aguirre.

San Francisco took the second half kickoff and traveled 73 yards in eight plays, Joe Perry scoring from the 7-ya rdmr ak.

A 49er fumble on thier own 11 led to a rapid Los Angeles touchdown, Dobbs passing to Ford for the distance.

Vetrano added three points to the San Francisco score with a 47-yard field goal in the third quarter and seven more points went up in the fourth when Albert finished his day with a 35-yard pass to Beals.

John Carroll Beats Canisius

Cleveland, Dec. 5 (AP). — John Carroll's Blue Streaks came back in the final quarter today to defeat the Canisius Golden Griffins, 14 to 13, in the second annual Great Lakes Bowl game. A crowd of 17,964 watched. Carl Taseff, Carroll's brilliant backfield star, plunged 2 yards for the tying touchdown and Quarterback Bob Kilfoyle kicked the winning extra point.

Fruit Bowl

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (AP).—Southern University's Jaguar Cats, completely outclassing their opponents on a muddy field, defeated San Francisco State College, 30-0, here today in the second annual Fruit Bowl game before approximately 5000 fans.

It was the eleevnth consecutive victory for the Cats.

B. C. Wins Frostbite Regatta Despite Point Tie With MIT

Boston College and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology wound up the two-day Intercollegiate Potomac Frostbite Regatta here today in a point tie for first place with 90 each.

But Boston College, for having finished nine of the 16 Tempest class dinghy races ahead of the favored MIT craft, received the Marvin-Gorman-Byrd Trophy, the regatta's top honor. The trophy was donated by and is named after the presidents of the three host schools, George Washington, Georgetown and Maryland.

Of the three local schools, Maryland finished highest, in fourth place with 84 points. Georgetown followed the Terrapins with 78 points and George Washington was sixth with 72 points.

The other two entries in the race, Yale and Princeton, finished second and seventh with 85 and 59 points each. Cornell and Harvard were also invited to compete but ran into transportation difficulties and couldn't make it.

Highest local honors went to Jack Martin of Maryland who finished in a tie for second place with Fred Blatt of MIT for high-scoring skipper. They both had 48 points. Tom Hanna, who was mainly responsible for Boston College's success, totaled 54 points as the top skipper of the regatta. Francis Charles and John McMath assisted Hanna in piling up the Boston total.

Chet Peet of Georgetown and Dick Carter of Yale were in third place in individual scoring with 46 points.

Minors' Report Asks Video Ban

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—An investigating committee of the National Association of Baseball Leagues, ruling body of the minors, today recommended that the televising of night games be banned.

Frank J. Shaughnessy, president of the International League and chairman of the committee, said that "ball clubs should not permit night games to be televised."

He said in the association's annual report that "televising afternoon games will help us, as it will interest the ladies and kids and bring baseball into the homes. But the night game attendance will soon be hurt badly because televising these games is simply advising the fans seeking and having time for recreation to get it as home without cost."

"It is my hope," he said, "that major league clubs will refuse to televise."

Rockets Get Goalie

Philadelphia, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Philadelphia Rockets of the American Hockey League today obtained Floyd Perras in a trade which sends Goalie Harvey Jessiman to Forst Worth in the United States hockey league.

Police Boys Club Opening Date Set

A new clubhouse for the Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 4 will be officially dedicated in ceremonies next Sunday at 3 p. m.

Constructed at a cost of approximately $200,000 dollars, the No. 4 clubhouse will be "unveiled" and presented to the public at ceremonies in which high Government officials, District Police and civic leaders, will participate. The building is located at 816 6th st. sw., and replaces an old structure located at 472 I st. sw.

The new building, containing 8000 square feet, was designed by Leon Chatelain, jr., president of the Washington Board of Trade and built by Joseph Nebel, member of the Police Boys Club board. It includes a gymnasium, library, game room, craft rooms, kitchen and dressing rooms.

Robert C. Simmons, chairman of the Police Boys Club directors, stated the dedicatory event will also signal the opening of the Special Gifts campaign of the Police Boys Club. The campaign proper will begin sometime in February.

Superintendent of Police Major Robert J. Barrett extended an invitation to the 70,000 members who enrolled in last winter's campaign to be on hand for the ceremony.

"We want as many as possible to visit this beautiful club," Major Barrett said. "We hope to add two more clubs to the six already operating and it is my aim to establish a police boys club in each of the 14 precincts."

Author Discusses Polygamy at Book Fair

Polygamy can be "hell," Bebecca Reyher of New York City, author of "Zulu Woman," said last night in a talk at the Arts Club of Washington, 2017 I st. nw.

Mrs. Reyher, who spent nine months in South Africa gathering material for her book, spoke before an audience of 200 at the opening of the club's New Book Fair.

Describing her observations in Zululand, the speaker said: "If you have as many wives as your money or position permits, you cannot help but become depraved." Due to the absence of emotion or feeling in the marital relationship, she said, "life becomes hollow and meaningless."

Questions Happiness

Mrs. Reyher said Europeans took the attitude that the native women were happy under polygamy because it was the custom. "But when I found that the majority of the cases in the magistrate's court were runaway wives," Mrs. Reyher said, "I came to the conclusion women couldn't be as happy under polygamy as they were said to be."

Mrs. Reyher explained that the heroine of her book, Christina, was the first woman to divorce her husband, King Solomon, choosing to be a servant in preference to being queen. Christina had been the first wife of Solomon, who subsequently brought some 60-odd more home to the kraal.

Mrs. Reyher was introduced by Mrs. Gladys Bowling, chairman of the fair.

The fair will be open to the public from 2 to 6 and 8 to 10 p. m. each day this week. Saturday, the final day, will be observed as children's day from 11 to 5 p. m.

Speakers will be: Today, 4 p. m., Catherine Turlington, author of "Three to Make Ready"; Tuesday, 4 p. m., Ann Y. Barley, author of "Patrick Calls Me Mother," and 8:30 p. m., Maj. Tobin Would Double Staff, With Woman In Important Post

LABOR: In private talks with labor leaders, Secretary Maurice Tobin has said: (1) that the top staff of the Labor Department must be doubled; (2) that he'll appoint one or more women to key jobs, and (3) that the department must pay better salaries to both officials and employes.

STANDARDS: Decentralization of some of the work of the National Bureau of Standards here is in the talk stage. This is the story:

The bureau's facilities on Connecticut ave. are inadequate. It needs several new buildings, one for its research on guided missiles and another for radio activities. Now the question is: Should this defense-important work be continued here or should it be transferred to some isolated place? No decision on it up to this time.

CIVIL SERVICE is looking into the lay-off of five Commerce Department employes because of age. The workers were fired because they were over 55 and they wouldn't have 15 years of service by the time they reach 70 and therefore be eligible for a livable retirement annuity. If any or all of these people were doing good jobs, it's a safe bet the commission will recommend that they be called back to work.

PAY RAISES: A week from today public hearings will be staged on the Flanders-Baldwin-O'Conor bill to raise salaries of top Federal officials. This measure would cover only 200-odd officials including Cabinet members, etc.

However, there's a drive on to try to persuade the Senate Civil Service Committee to amend the measure to include increases for the President, Vice President and officials such as bureau chiefs, special assistants, general counsels, etc.

As it now stands, the Administration will oppose amending the bill to include bureau chiefs, general counsels and that layer of Government officialdom. If Congress fixed the salaries of these people, it would give their jobs political implications which most of the people in them wouldn't want. It will be up to the committee to decide for itself on pay raises for the President and Vice President.

Most of the good employe union officials are displaying a statesmanlike attitude on the executive pay bill. They will support it. They realize it's the only fair thing to do; that this executive group is perhaps the only one in the country whose salaries haven't been raised in years, and finally, that it's to the best interest of the employes to have well-paid and able officials.

Incidentally, the secret goal of the bill's sponsors is to get it written into law by January 20 in order to give President Truman a pay raise. Otherwise, the President's salary couldn't be boosted for another four years.

All of which brings up the question of what's to be done on salary adjustments for all other Federal people. Well, you can be sure of two things: (1) that the Administration will not request another flat, general, across-the-board pay raise, and (2) that it will urge revision of the Classification Act along the lines debated on Capitol Hill earlier this year.

Salary increases for bureau chiefs, executive assistants, general counsels, etc., would be taken care of in the proposed revamping of the Classification Act. But how much of an increase the rank-and-file employe would get out of the revision is one of those unknowns at this moment.

DECISIONS: The Comptroller General has decided the recent $330 pay raise can't be given to Forrestal's assistants at National Defense, nor to the Undersecretaries and Assistant Secretaries of Navy, Army, and Air Force . . . Also, that the Census Bureau does not have the power to hire Federal workers for part-time jobs outside of Washington on its census of business.

NAVY: It must now absorb the cost of pay raises it now gives to its per diem, or wage board employes . . . SPEECHES: The Hoover plan on efficiency ratings will be debated tomorrow night at a Society fo. Personnel Administration meeting in the National Archives Auditorium. And Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, will speak at a dinner meeting Wednesday of the American Society for Public Administration at the YWCA . . .

POST OFFICE: Hollywood is making a movie of the work of postal employes.

STATE: Several "disgusted" secretaries of the State Department signed this letter: "We wish the reorganizers of our department would include some method by which secretaries would not have to sit all day with nothing to do while their bosses are out at 'conferences and meetings,' and then have to start taking dictation and do 1000 other things when it's time to go home.

"We must be in our offices all day in case of important calls and our day's work begins at quitting time. It 'taint fair. It's mighty hard on those of us who have evening classes or just ordinary appointments.'

Alexandria To Pass on 1949 Budget December 17

Public Hearing Date Scheduled On $3.9 Billion Finance Program

On December 17, Alexandrians will have their annual chance to tell their City Council how much money it should spend next year and for what.

Their opportunity comes at the public hearing on the city budget for the fiscal year beginning January 1. It will be held in the council room on the second floor of City Hall at 7:30 p. m.

Each item on the tentative budget will be read off, and the public may ask questions or give advice as it chooses. Following the hearing the councilmen will officially adopt a budget. If it follows last year's action it will be about the same as the figure on which they had previously agreed.

The tentative budget calls for expenditures of $3,936,624 in the coming year as compared with $3,227,749 in 1948.

The council does not propose to increase tax rates. Increased spending is expected to be financed by a $219,000 surplus and revenue from new residents and businesses.

A breakdown of the budget to department level follows:

Officer Gets 3d Burglar In His Home

For the third time in as many months, Police Inspector Oscar Letterman returned home from duty just in time to capture an intruder in his home.

O. J. Letterman

It was 1 a. m. yesterday when the inspector entered his house at 2032 F st. nw. As he went in he noticed an automobile parked abreast in front. Inside he heard stealthy footsteps on the second floor and the sound of someone trying the bedroom doors.

Letterman waited in the shadows at the foot of the stairs, he said, and "the fellow came down, right into my arms."

The police official said he held the man while his wife called the Third Precinct station house for a scout car. It was then that he learned the car parked out front belonged to the intruder.

The man, identified as William Foy, alias William Fore, alias Robert Moore, 47, of 1909 14th st. nw., was charged with housebreaking. Letterman said he did not have any valuables in his possession.

Taxi Driver Robbed of $30 By Passenger

'Friendly' Fare Pulls Gun on Hacker in Rock Creek Park

An amiable passenger, who chatted pleasantly with the cab driver while they drove through Rock Creek Park, suddenly changed character yesterday and robbed the driver at gun point of $30 in cash.

The hacker, Clifford Jarrell, who lives about a mile north of Rockville, Md., told police he picked up the man at Wisconsin and Western aves. nw. about 1:40 a. m. and was ordered to drive to Union Station. On the way, they chatted about general things, he said.

When the cab driver got near the P st. bridge in Rock Creek pkwy, however, the passenger suddenly ordered him to stop, Jarrell said. When he looked back, he faced a .45-caliber automatic, the cab driver said.

The passenger took his money, climbed out of the cab and then ordered "get going," which Jarrell did without wasting time. He described the man as being 25 to 30 years old, of medium build and wearing blue dungarees, a brown suede jacket and a light slouch hat.

Society Spends $40,000 on Aid To Destitute

The District St. Vincent de Paul Society spent more than $40,000 during the past year in assisting destitute Washington families, reports made yesterday at the society's meeting disclosed.

More than 175 members, meeting at St. Cyprian's parish hall, 13th and C sts. se., were told that the society aided a total of 3864 persons in 864 destitute families in the 12-month period just ended.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, attended the meeting, which heard reports of 31 of 34 District parishes.

The archbishop praised members of the society for the work it had accomplished and stressed the need for it to continue.

Largest source of income for the society, the reports revealed, were poor-boxes in parish churches. Second largest source was legacies.

The $40,000 spent during the year went for food, clothing coal, medicine and other needs of destitute families.

Mother, Son Hurt as Car Strikes Train

Husband Informed Of Bowie Accident While Seeking Her Arrest for Assault

A 28-year-old Prince Georges County mother and her 5-year-old son escaped death early yesterday when a train demolished the family car at Bowie, Md.

The collision occurred while the woman's husband was applying for a warrant against her, charging assault with a dangerous weapon.

The woman, Mrs. Lillian Y. Sturgis of 33-K Washington ave., Lanham Park, Md., was under treatment last night at Prince Georges General Hospital for possible jaw fracture, shock and lacerations of the face, hands and legs.

Her son, Bernard D. Sturgis, was treated for shock and abrasions to his hands and legs, then released to his father, Bernard L. Sturgis.

Prince Georges County Justice of the Peace Harry Fiddesop gave this account of circumstances surrounding the case:

Sturgis came to the Hyattsville Police Station at about 5 a. m. yesterday to apply for the warrant, charging assault with a dangerous weapon.

He told Fiddesop that he and his wife had attended a party Saturday night, leaving young Bernard with a grandmother in Mount Rainier, Md.

Sturgis said both he and his wife had some drinks at the party, and returned home at about 4 a. m. He said he went to bed immediately, but that his wife, who wished to get young Bernard, had "gotten mad" because he wanted to wait until morning to bring their son home.

Sturgis said he was applying for the warrant because his wife had gotten a knife, chased him out of bed and out of the house. Later the couple drove together to the grandmother's house to get the child.

Sturgis said as soon as his wife got the child into their car she drove off, "leaving me standing there."

Justice Fiddlesop said while he was attempting to dissuade Sturgis from obtaining the assault warrant word came of a train-automobile crash at Zug rd.

Sturgis accompanied police to the scene of the wreck.

Police identified Zug Crossing as an unprotected grade crossing on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Bowie. They said the road across the tracks was used infrequently, since it served only a few families.

When Sturgis reached the scene, he identified the demolished car as his own. Mrs. Sturgis had taken the child to a nearby house. Members of the Bowie Rescue Squad took them to the hospital.

According to police, the car had been hit by Pennsylvania passenger train No. 431, bound from Baltimore to Washington. The train engineer, Herbert H. Possinger of Claymont, Del., said the car had come over one track, and ran head-on into the train, hitting it at a point just to the rear of the engineer's cab.

Police quoted Possinger as saying there was a good deal of fog and mist in the air at the time of the accident.

Force of the impact tore the motor from the car. The motor came to rest about 13 feet away. The car itself was thrown about 69 feet to the northside of the track. Police said they believed Mrs. Sturgis and the child had been thrown clear of the car at the first impact.

Broadcast Recalls 1900 Inauguration

The first program in a series of radio broadcasts by the Washington Board of Trade yesterday harked back to the inauguration of President McKinley in 1900 and looked forward to President Truman's inauguration of January 20, 1949.

During the program, known as "Your Town," and broadcast over WTOP, Harry C. Grove, president of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association and one of the oldest members of the Board of Trade, told about the bitter cold March day when McKinley was inaugurated.

"There was not so much of a housing problem then," he recalled, "because housing was provided by most of the home owners.

Grove, who is nearing 80, was interviewed by Robert Lewis of the Columbia Broadcasting System news staff, permanent moderator for the series.

Leon Chatelain, jr., Board of Trade president, discussed the current plans of the 8000 organization members, which include cooperation with an estimated 350 convention groups next year, the inauguration program, the welcoming of members of the new Congress at a reception banquet set for January 4 and the planning of the 1950 Sesquicentennial celebration.

Chatelain also noted that the Trade Board's various committees were preparing data for the information of the next Congress. The Sesquicentennial will be the subject of the next program at 1:15 p. m. Sunday.

Girl, 17, Dies As Car Rolls Over After Hood Opens

Police File Two Charges Against Driver, Listed as Karl W. Roscher, 19

Miss Virginia Marakle, 17-year-old Western High School graduate, was killed near Chaney, Md., yesterday when the hood of a convertible in which she was passenger snapped open, causing the car to swerve and roll over three times.

Charged with manslaughter and reckless driving was Karl W. Roscher, 19, of 730 Marietta pl. nw., who was listed as the driver. Roscher was admitted to Calvert County Hospital at Prince Frederick, about 8 miles north of the scene of the accident, with knee and back injuries.

MISS VIRGINIA MARAKLE
. . . dead after accident

A third passenger, identified by police as Randolph Balthos, was treated for slight injuries and released. Balthos was also said to be of Washington but his full address could not be immediately determined.

According to word received by the dead girl's mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred V. Holmes of 3700 Huntington st. nw., the crash occurred about 1:10 a. m. on Route 416 when the car's hood suddenly flew up, blocking Roscher's vision.

Cause Not Determined

Prince Frederick State police said it was not determined what caused the hood to snap open.

Holmes, a contractor, said he was told the vehicle rolled over three times after going out of control. According to Dr. Hugh M. Ward, Calvert County medical examiner, Miss Marakle was thrown clear of the vehicle and died instantly of a fractured skull.

Roscher was charged by Maryland State Trooper Walter H. Wahl, who investigated the mishap. Date of the hearing was not stated.

Miss Marakle, her stepfather said, came to Washington in 1931 with the family. She was presently employed at Georgetown medical school in clerical work.

After graduation from Western High School last year, she had attended Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va., and then went to work at the medical school.

The girl was one of four Western High School students who on May 6, 1947, walked out of an assembly in protest against a talk they believed to be unfair in comparing Russia and the United States.

A few days later they were presented American flags by Representative Alvin E. O'Konski (R., Wis.) in ceremonies at his office for the stand they took.

Besides her mother and stepfather, Miss Marakle is survived by a half-brother, Gerald.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at the Huntington st. residence. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

In the District, a 72-year-old pushcart peddler was injured early yesterday when he was struck by an auto at 14th and T sts. nw.

He was Joseph Thompson, of 912 Barry pl. nw., who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital in fair condition suffering a compound fracture to the right arm.

Police identified the driver of the auto as Thomas Christakos, 22, a lunch room counterman, of 410 Farragut st. nw., who was charged with driving while drunk and driving to the left of a loading platform. He was released under $600 bond for his appearance in Municipal Court today.

Not Glasses, but Eye Training, Needed By Many Who Are Inefficient, Doctor Says

If your secretary takes too long to read the morning mail—

If she has headaches and gets worn out before the end of the day—

Don't necessarily blame her intelligence or education, or jump at the quick conclusion her night life is catching up with her.

It may be her eyes — and her need of visual training . . . training in how to see.

So cautioned Dr. John E. Wright of Chicago, head of the orthoptic and visual training clinic of the Northern Illinois College of Optometry, here yesterday.

Only in more scientific language.

Dr. Wright spoke before about 50 optometrists from the District of Columbia and nearby Virginia and Maryland at a visual training seminar sponsored by the District Optometric Association.

The seminar was held at the Professional Arts Building, 1722 I st. nw.

Many Government workers, stenographers, bankers and students, he said, are only 50 per cent efficient in reading and other close work because of their inability to see correctly.

And glasses, he added, won't be the answer in many of the cases.

"Seeing is a retino-cortical-effector response," he explained—a coordination of the eyes, the brain and the nervous system.

What many of these persons need is simply to learn the necessary coordination by visual training through use of special instruments and instruction sessions.

Actually a person's reading ability, he said, can be improved from 100 words a minute to 300 to 400 words a minute, and reading discomfort eliminated, by such training.

It "mediates," he said, between the "natural eye" and the "unnatural demands placed upon it by civilization."

It can make some persons 200 to 300 per cent more efficient, he declared, eliminating the strain placed on the nervous system by incorrect seeing.

So if your secretary doesn't see right, see about her seeing.

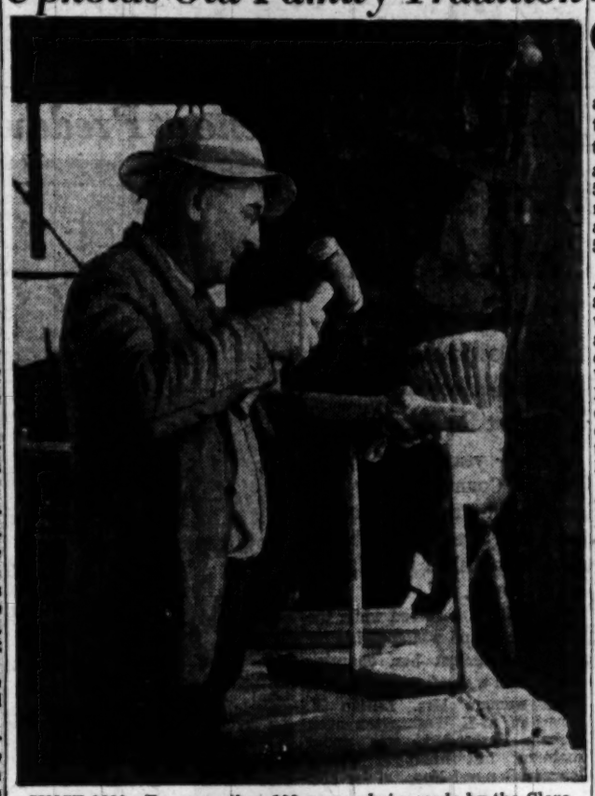
James Clore's Chair-Making Upholds Old Family Tradition



SINCE 1830—For more than 100 years, chairs made by the Clore family at Madison, Va., have won fame. James C. Clore, head of the family, is shown using a rawhide mallet to set sections of a chair together. When the wood shrinks it holds tighter than if if were glued

BY HAND—The seats for all Clore chairs are hand woven by neighboring women workers. Mrs. Ethel Hawkins, surrounded by chairs awaiting seats, nears completion of a handwoven seat while her daughter, Edith, 2, watches. Each seat takes about an hour's work

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Madison, Va., Dec. 5.—James C. Clore of Madison operates two funeral homes, raises beef cattle and makes chairs. Mostly he makes chairs in much the same way his family has been doing it on the same spot since 1830.

With his son, who doubles as an undertaker, and seven or eight workmen who also help tend the farm, Clore each year turns out 2400 hand-made chairs that are known the world over.

Clore chairs are early American ladderbacks, plain chairs, children's seats and rockers. Most are built of walnut with fiber cord seats. Sometimes a customer brings in his own specifications. But they don't vary much from the basic designs.

Among Clore's customers have been Harry F. Byrd, Edward R. Stettinius, a British admiral, Episcopal High School and Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Virgina State prison camps and Hebron Lutheran Church in Madison—"oldest Lutheran church in continual use in this country."

They do some selling to jobbers, however. Among them is a dealer in Connecticut to whom the family has sold for 60 years but has never seen. Clore chairs have found their way into homes in each of the 48 States, Canada, Cuba and the Panama Canal Zone.

One day a couple stopped at the shop and asked if Clore delivered. He said he did. They bought two chairs to be delivered to their home in Johanesburg, South Africa. Clore proudly boasts that the chairs arrived without a scratch.

Clore is an old name in Madison. Michael came with 12 other German Lutheran families from Germanna, Va., in 1725, to settle in the Robinson River Valley 15 miles south of Culpeper in the shadow of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Route No. 29 runs by the Clore home.

Process Hardly Changed

Moses started the Clore business, in which succeeding generations have followed him. The only substantial change in the process during that time was the substitution of electricity to run the machinery. In 1901 the little factory was burned out and moved 100 yards to the present nondescript, white clapboard building.

Clore, a hearty 63, recalls vividly the evolution of the source of power to turn the lathe. When he started learning the trade 50 years ago, his father walked a bull on a treadmill. ("I remember because I sprained my ankle on it.")

No nails or glue are used in Clore chairs. Clore refers to the results of such mass production methods as "Northern chairs." He uses only wooden pegs and application of the physical law that green wood contracts as it seasons.

With a wooden mallet he drives a thoroughly dry rung, its tip a little larger than the rest, into a hole drilled in a half-seasoned post. As the post dries it squeezes around the rung until "a horse pulling in a straight line couldn't drag it out."

No Spray Guns

Neighboring farmers' wives weave seats on the finished frames. Five finishing coats with brushes—not spray guns—and a gentle buffing to bring out the grain finish the job.

Clore probably could expand his shop 10 times and sell every chair without moving outside the door. His son and partner, also James C. (the middle names are different, but the initial was kept identical for the sake of business continuity), said one dealer wants to take their whole output.

Debs to Bow Tonight At Bachelors' Cotillion

By Marie McNair

It's Cotillion night in Baltimore—traditionally the first Monday in December for the first Monday German. It's the night when scores of Grade A debutantes from East Coast cities make their bows to society, just as their mothers and grandmothers did before them.

Tradition wields a weighty scepter over our Baltimore neighbors' heads.

So-o-o- tonight it will be the old Lyric Theater again, as a setting for this first Bachelors Cotillion of the year. Again the debutantes will be smothered in flowers for the colorful remembrances sent by the friends for the occasion are piled into the smilax festooned boxes which ring the walls.

The soft light of candles will flicker from the same gold chandelier just as it did 200 years ago when the Bachelors Cotillion was organized. The pretty debs will be in white; they'll carry white flowers when they dance the cotillion figure, and to play no favorites, they'll alternate their bouquets during the evening.

Slow Music

The orchestra will set its tempo to slow and graceful waltzes, dignified fox trots, and the chaperone will make her rare appearance once more. The dance will get under way around 11 o'clock, and the debutantes will come on from dinner parties held in their honor.

Miss Agnes Devereux, the Joseph Devereux's blonde daughter, will be among those from Washington to be presented. She'll have as her escort Ernest Judson Clark, jr., and she'll be entertained at dinner by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Devereux, at their home in nearby Ruxton. Mr. and Mrs. Devereux will be there to see their daughter make her bow, so will Joseph Devereux, jr.

Agnes will carry purple orchids, wear a gown of cream-colored nylon tulle made with off-shoulder neckline and heirloom family rose point lace will form a peplum and edge the decolletage.

Miss Devereux's Washington debut, postponed from the Christmas holidays, will take place at Eastertime.

Dinner Parties

Gwendolyn Fairlamb, Constance Logan and Joan Theresa Pennington, will have Baltimore debuts tonight too.

Gwendolyn, who will be introduced to Washington society by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Fairlamb, on December 20, will have not one but three escorts for the evening. They are George Calvert, jr., (pronounced Cawlvert); Kimloch Nelson of Baltimore and Robert Cyran of Philadelphia. First, there'll be a dinner party at the Belvedere, given by the debutante's uncle and aunt, Capt. and Mrs. C. Benedict Platt of Washington, and Mrs. Fairlamb's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Grafton Dulany Rogers of Baltimore.

White and silver lace will fashion the debut gown which will have a bouffant skirt and a portrait neckline. Gwen will carry an old fashioned bouquet of gardenias and roses.

Anton Burgers, Commercial Attache of the Netherlands Embassy will go over with Miss Pennington to be her escort at the cotillion, and with them the debutantes' parents, M.r and Mrs. James A. G. Pennington, to be chaperones. Charles Fisher will be an escort, so, too, will Oliver Reeder. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher will be hosts at a dinner for Miss Pennington at the Mount Vernon Club.

Constance Logan is sure to be as pretty as the proverbial pink in her white lace gown with a billowing skirt of nylon tulle. The bodice which is strapless fits her slim figure to the hips, has a scarf arrangement of tulle. She will carry a muff of scarlet roses. And with John Larnard as her escort she'll be among the guests at the dinner in honor of her sister deb, Gwendolyn Fairlamb. Also in the company will be Miss Logan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown Jacobs.

TOWN TOPICS:

Bertha Joseph, secretary to former Senator George Radcliffe for a dozen or more years, is back on The Hill. This time it's by appointment as liaison officer to Senator Carl Hayden, chairman of the joint Congressional Inaugural Committee.

Bertha will be as busy as a bird dog, taking care of the thousand and one little details which her boss won't be able to handle. And anyone knowing Bertha knows how well she will do it.

The Portuguese Ambassador, Pedro Theotonio Pereira, set a record for take-off speed the other day. It was but two hours after he received a cable from Lisbon telling him of the death of his father, that he was in a plane and over the blue Atlantic.

DATE-BOOK DATA:

The Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Attila Ache have issued invitations for a reception in the Continental Room of Wardman Park Hotel on Monday, December 13, from 6:30 to 8:30 in celebration of Brazilian Navy Day.

Infectious Colds Spreading Here

SPECIAL REPORTS SHOW COLDS ON INCREASE!

As miserable colds continue to spread through many neighborhoods, mothers today are advised to follow these simple health rules:

Live normally. Avoid excesses. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Avoid crowds. And if anyone in your family does catch a cold, always remember . . .

The best-known home remedy you can use to relieve distress of colds is warming, comforting Vicks VapoRub!

STARTS INSTANTLY . . .

The moment you rub it on throat, chest and back, VapoRub starts right to work to bring relief. It Penetrates into upper bronchial tubes with special medicinal vapors. It Stimulates chest and back surfaces like a good comforting poultice.

WORKS FOR HOURS . . .

And . . . VapoRub actually keeps up this wonderful Penetrating-Stimulating action for hours—keeps working to bring relief even while you sleep! It relieves coughs, soothes irritation, and relieves muscular soreness and tightness. Often by morning the worst miseries of the cold are gone!

But remember . . . you get this special Penetrating-Stimulating action only when you use Vicks VapoRub! So for children and for grown-ups, always be sure you relieve distress of colds with the one and only Vicks VapoRub.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Three Children, Under 5, Are Permitted To Call Parents by First Name; Their Mother Is Criticized for This and Other Informality

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am married and have a very good husband and three lovely little daughters. My eldest daughter Carla is almost five and she has always called her father and me by our first names—Carl and Edna.

Also I call my mother-in-law by her first name, Martha, and everybody thinks this practise of addressing the older generation by first name is awful. They say it manifests lack of respect for my mother-in-law, and that it's wrong of me to allow our children to call me Edna, instead of "mommie" or mother.

I have had a number of arguments with my three sisters-in-law about this, and would welcome your opinion to settle the dispute. So please tell me the proper way to address one's mother-in-law; and tell me also whether it's wrong (and why) to let one's children grow up calling parents by first name. E. G.

Customary Usage Safe Social Guide

DEAR E. G.: In another era it was said, "When in Rome, do as the Romans do." Meaning that unobtrusive manners are best—those which don't label one eccentric as compared to majority behavior.

Customary social usage is the guide to acceptable manners in any situation or relationship. And when one applies this criterion to the question of how to address one's mother-in-law, one finds two principal "schools of example" in the western world.

For instance, it is more or less prevalent custom amongst the so-called gentry—those bred for generations in the "polite" tradition that accrues to inherited wealth and transmitted culture—to speak of one's mother-in-law and directly salute her as Mrs. Grant, and to persist in this formality until such time as she may kindly waive the formality by suggesting that her son's wife call her Mother, or Mother Grant, or even Martha—or maybe the pet-name her son coined for her.

In the event Mrs. Grant invites the more intimate address, it were bad manners not to oblige her nicely thereafter, although it may be a difficult mouthful for the bride or matron who doesn't feel en rapport with her mother-in-law.

Children Prefer Regulation Living

IN THE second, more populous "school of example" established in the broad community of the great middle-to-lower echelon of society, mothers-in-law are addressed as Mother Grant right off the bat; and it's not uncommon for an engaged girl to thus address her fiance's mother even before the knot is tied.

But in neither group, so far as I know, does a well-mannered girl address her mother-in-law by first name, without having had the privilege wished upon her—unless perhaps they have a seasoned co-worker acquaintanceship, or were on first-name terms from the younger's childhood. Thus your manner of speaking is rather flip, judged by standard criteria; and may be unwittingly offensive to your mother-in-law's sense of dignity or concept of her social due.

About the children: you are injecting a falsetto note into the family relationship and cheating them of a priceless ingredient of "normalcy," in letting them grow up without use of, or "feel" of, the rich proud words (from a loved child's viewpoint) of "Mother" and "Dad"—"my dad" and "my mommie."

Children nearing school age don't want to be different in any respect from other children; they want only to be super-normal in all attributes of enviable home-life, regulation style; so there is haunting embarrassment in store for your brood—to add to the "lost chord" deficit already cited—if you continue to train them in first-name address of their parents. Designer Urges Patent Law For Frills

French designer Raymond Barbas threatened Saturday to get after American dressmakers with pinking shears if they don't stop making $8.95 copies of his beautiful $500 gowns.

They have taken a big tuck in his morale, as well as his income, he said, by selling facsimiles of his fashions as house dresses.

"House dresses!" he roared. "Isn't that terrible? My beautiful art wilting over the kitchen stove. There ought to be a law."

A law is exactly what Barbas is after. He is president of Jean Patou, Inc., one of Paris' leading couriers—French for dressmaker—and heads a handful of organizations to foster the export of French creations to the United States and other countries. But he wants to export his own gowns and not just the ideas, so he is asking Congress to enable dressmakers to patent their frills, flounces and falsies.

France has a patent law which protects dressmakers, he said, and everyone gets along very nicely.

"But in the United States, everyone is protected but the designer," he complained. "You wouldn't think of stealing a piece of music or copying a painting, but my artistic creations are being copied all over the place.

Barbas said it breaks his heart to see gingham versions of his silks and satins on the streets of New York after all the hard work he puts into them. It takes 400 employes in his exclusive sewing room weeks to whip up 100 models.

"And then they become housedresses," he declared. "Bah."

He said he was flattered, of course, that Americans thought enough of his artistry to want to copy it, but he'd like to have his pocketbook, as well as his ego, inflated.

Ask Anne Where Sesame Seed Can Be Bought

Where can sesame seed, for use in making cakes or cookies, be bought in Washington?
V. R. C.

A grocery on 14th st. which specializes in spices and seasonings sells sesame seeds. It can be reached by calling Decatur 6717.

Is the cultured sour cream bottled by dairies the same in calorie value as fresh heavy cream? I am on a reducing diet and would like to pep up my raw vegetables with a small amount of sour cream dressing if the cream does not contain too many calories. Is cultured buttermilk made (by the dairies) from whole or skim milk?
R. T. B.

Cultured sour cream is made from cream with a 20 per cent fat content and so would have the same caloric value as coffee cream. Cultured buttermilk has approximately 1½ per cent fat content which is less than the 3½ per cent fat content required in the District for whole milk. A chemist at one of the large Washington dairies tells me that this fat can be successfully removed by pouring the chilled milk through a fine strainer because the fat remains in large enough globules to remain in the strainer.

Will you tell me how to keep a border on a wall which has been newly painted with water-mixed paint?
M. B. H.

Apply a coat of clear shellac to the wall where the strip is to be placed. When the shellac is thoroughly dry, apply glue or a coat of the shellac to the border and attach to the sized strip.

Please print a recipe for finger paint.
M. B. H.

Dr. Ernest G. Osborne's "Family Scrapbook" in The Washington Post recently gave these directions for making finger paint:

"Take 1/3 cup glossy laundry starch, 2 cups boiling water, and ½ cup soap flakes. Dissolve starch in small amount of cold water to make paste. Add boiling water. Cook until it becomes clear. Stir constantly. Remove pan from stove, add soap flakes, stir until dissolved. Put part of mixture into each of several jars that can be kept tightly closed. Add vegetable or calcimine coloring so that there are several colors from which to select."

Is it possible to make a dressing table skirt with a matching stool skirt out of a pair of curtains? I would like to have them made out of some flimsy white curtains. The pattern I would like is the very popular two or three flounce one.
H. S.

Since you haven't given me the size of the curtains, it isn't possible to say whether there would be enough material in them for the skirts. However, you usually figure two to three times as much material to make a ruffled skirt as you would to make one without a ruffle. Unless the curtains are unusually large, I'm afraid there wouldn't be enough material in one pair for both skirts. Your idea of using curtains which you have on hand is good; they will make a nice skirt. Perhaps you can round up one or two more pair of curtains like the ones you have.

Is there some way to whiten pearls that have turned yellowish-gray wih age? These are not real pearls.
H. S.

I know of no satisfactory way to whiten pearls. To many people the mellowness which most pearls acquire with age is not at all objectionable.

To C. C. and J. W. M. who have both inquired about removing grease stains caused by dripping candles on washable materials:

Place the spot between two white blotters and press with a warm iron. Change the boltters as they become soiled. If all of the stain has not been removed, sponge with carbon tetrachloride or other grease solvent.

How do you remove lipstick from linen?
C. C.

Work clear vaseline or colorless shortening into the stain and let stand to loosen it. After a few minutes, rub between the fingers, then sponge with carbon tetrachloride to remove the fat and the lipstick with it. Any color which remains when the fat is gone can be removed by sponging with denatured alcohol, diluted two parts water to one part alcohol.

How do you clean a copper tea kettle?
T. R.

Wipe the copper with a soft cloth which has been dipped in a solution of vinegar and salt. Add as much salt to the vinegar as it will take up. Or, you could use one of the metal polishes, creams or polishing cloths which are sold at housewares counters.

Nose Is Out of Joint

It's seldom that a youngster who is confronted with a new baby brother or sister fails to show some evidence of the fact that he's upset. There may be no signs of jealousy toward the baby, no talk about sending it back, no pinching, no fussing when mother is caring for the new arrival. Instead, he may be much more quarrelsome with other children than he ever has before. Or he stays by himself to an unusual degree. In one way or another, he shows that "his nose is out of joint."

Adults will sometimes think this is funny or cute and talk about it before the youngster. Friends or relatives may tease him about not being "mommy's baby" any longer. Perhaps parents think any behavior that might come from jealousy should be ignored.

But the experience is no laughing matter for the older child. He may not realize why he is disturbed. He may have real affection for the newcomer. Having one's "nose out of joint" is painful even when we are speaking only figuratively. Common sense tells us that comforting, not teasing, is what the child needs.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

We Mustn't Get Ahead Of Ourselves

Once again the District is cracking down on clergymen who are not prompt in filing notices of the marriages they perform.

The reason the law must be obeyed is obvious:

When preachers unite a young couple these days
They should, as a matter of course,
Complete wedding records with speed and dispatch
Before there's a suit for divorce.

GRAVE QUESTION

The office wise-guy wants to know whether the Chambers microfilm revelations aren't just a publicity stunt for that chain of funeral parlors.

DID ANYBODY STAY AT HOME SATURDAY?

Mr. Dewey was going to come down here and show Washington the greatest "unsnarling" operation in its history.

It's too bad he couldn't make it in time for the Christmas traffic jams.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Bright, lively, intelligent fox terrier." (H. Lee Dailey, Purcellville, Va.—1 mile west of Hillsboro on Route 9, en route to Charles Town races).

"Two puppies, part fox terrier; 7 weeks old, weaned." (Victor 8914).

"Beautiful black and white cat, pure alley; doesn't like anybody, will eat you out of house and home, and complain if her meals are a minute late." (Adams 7438).

"Pretty black and white half-grown kitten, very affectionate." (Adams 0865).

HERE'S YOUR HAT. WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?

They say he's full of get-up-and-go,
But I just can't agree.
He never did get up an go 'way
Quite soon enough for me.

Ruth H. Norris,
10 N. Summit ave.,
Chatham, N. J.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

On December 1, we received our tax forms from the State of Virginia. Payment was due on December 5, "under penalty of law."

Is it fair to give such short notice? Name Withheld.

Dear Sir:

It's not only unfair, but I would think it would also be poor business. It seems to me they'd collect more if they'd give reasonable notice. Bill.

MISCELLANY

Ellen Wilson of 1819 G st. nw. reports that the news vendor at 18th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. hawked his wares the other night by calling: "Mme. Chiang—China — Berlin — Charleston—and Anacostia" . . . In a paragraph which is so light it's almost illegible, Mary A. Cottrell of 3997 East Capitol st. raises an eyebrow at "be-bop glasses." Then, in neat, black letters below, she adds: "After wondering what had happened to my typewriter, I discover that my small daughter has pushed the gadget that shifts the ribbon into neutral, for stencils. Aren't kids wonderful?" . . . Dolly Shepperson of 1202 S. Alfred st., Alexandria, Va., tells me that the Christ Episcopal Church bazaar tomorrow (2 to 9 p. m.) will not only offer the usual array of Christmas gift suggestions, but a showing of water color portraits by Mrs. Frank Niepold and silhouettes by Mrs. Louise Browning and Mrs. Florence Messer . . . B'nai B'rith Women, Business and Professional Chapter, will hold a Gay Nineties party in the Christian Heurich brewery Wednesday at 8:30 p. m., with the proceeds earmarked for aid to Israel. Shirley Jacobson (Emerson 5217) has the tickets . . . And at the same time, same night, the National Lutheran Chorus will sing a concert of sacred Christmas music in Constitution Hall, a cappella, with the audience joining in on familiar carols . . . For singing of another type, everybody is welcome Thursday night at 8:15 at the First Congregational Church (10th and G sts. nw.) to hear seven Barbershop Quartets—the Chordinators, Democrats, Capitolians, Columbians, Trouble Shooters, Potomac Clippers and Singing Squires. Dr. Robert H. Harmon will direct . . . Golly but I've got a lot of short items today . . . Thanks for more streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital from E. M. Nelson of 1830 Jackson st. ne. . . . Mrs. Flossie Street of 2518 Tunlaw rd. nw. commends the courtesy of Capital Transit operator 1002 (Friendship Heights line) in helping an old man. Company records list No. 1002 as Joseph Edward Miller of 216 O st. sw., who is in his seventh year with the transit firm . . . This department needs more space. Everything has gone up in the past few years except the number of inches in my column.

A PEELING ITEM

Helen A. James of the Ontario Apartments and Mrs. Henry Petersen of 4710 Edgemoor lane, Bethesda, Md., wonder whether The Washington Post's left hand knows that its right hand is peeling potatoes.

On November 30 we ran a story under the headline: "Pare Potatoes Before Boiling."

But on the following day, we ran another story under the headline: "Peeling Potatoes Wastes Food Value."

'TWAS EVER THUS

Chinese Communists and Nationalists are both claiming victory. Apparently the only loser is China.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

Edward Johnson, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera, was reminiscing this week about the time he sang at the Rome premiere of Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi." The world premiere of this opera had taken place 24 hours earlier at the Metropolitan Opera. . . . The event in Rome, however, was made memorable by the presence of Puccini as conductor. When the opera was over and the cast had taken it bows, Johnson tried to get Puccini to come onstage for a bow but the composer conductor modestly seemed reluctant. Johnson held his arms, urging him to come onstage. Puccini whispered: "Pull, pull."

Paul Lockwood, No. 1 aide to Governor Dewey, returned to New York this week after a trip to recuperate from the Presidential campaign. Lockwood shed 50 pounds in the campaigns for the nomination and the Presidency . . . The War Department doesn't consider accreditation as a correspondent in the last war sufficient for reaccreditation now. The applicant-veterans must file the same papers as those who've never been accredited, and go through a security check-up . . . Juan Negrin, former Prime Minister of Loyalist Spain, operates a commerical farm near London where he raises geese for pate de foise gras.

Clark Smith, the schoolmaster in "Edward, My Son," played the same role in the London company. There was a dock strike when he arrived to appear in the New York production, and so he had to remove and carry his own luggage. The producers' representative who was to meet him at the pier didn't show up. Smith, who had no American dollars, borrowed money from another passenger and drove to the Algonquin, where the producers had promised reservations. The management knew nothing about it. He walked to the theater where the play was being rehearsed, and heard a member of the cast exchanging insults with a company official. This was Smith's first night in America in 18 years. He wheeled, left the theatre, prepared to go back to England . . . Someone stopped him on the street in time, persuaded him to return—and now he likes New York so much he's remaining permanently.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Small-Nation Ruhr Control Urged

By Drew Pearson

Washington, D. C.,
December 5, 1948.

My Dear General Marshall:

You may possibly recall a conversation I had with you shortly after you became Secretary of State in which you talked about the fact that a soldier, in order to fight well, must have the will to fight. Weapons alone, you said, don't make a good soldier.

Gen. Marshall

I remember the conversation most vividly because you talked with such great eloquence and feeling and described various cases during the war when well-trained, well-armed troops did not put their heart into battle because they did not understand why they were fighting.

I have thought of this conversation many times since then. I thought of it a year ago, when, traveling through Europe, I had a chance to get acquainted with some of its war-weary people. And I have thought of it more recently as you have proposed a policy of arming these war-weary people as a bulwark of American defense.

The great majority of the American people, I feel sure, agree with your policy, in principle—as do I. Certainly the friendly countries of western Europe should be armed against the threat of an invading Red army, and the investment will be more than worth while—if they will fight.

Europe Won't Fight

However, as you yourself so eloquently indicated, guns are no good unless you have men to fire them. And today I greatly fear the people of western Europe would not fight.

They would not fight because they are tired of war, because they do not want to see their farms and factories become another battle-ground, and finally because they do not see enough difference between the aims of Russia and the United States to get in the middle of another great conflagration.

They like the United States. They trust us more than they do Russia. They want to be friendly, and they are reasonably grateful for the Marshall Plan. But their friendship does not go to the extent of fighting.

This does not mean they won't declare war, nor that the generals won't try to lead troops into battle. They will. But generals are worth little without soldiers who follow them, and today the common folks of western Europe who make up the backbone of any army, just aren't going to follow the generals. They will fade away just as fast as the Belgians, the Dutch and the French faded before Hitler.

I am sure you will find that the intelligence reports of the United States Army agree with this.

Battle of Ideas

Therefore, it seems to me that our problem of defense in western Europe boils down to the question of inspiring the same will to defend themselves that you and others inspired in the American Army from 1942 to 1945.

Which means that this is a battle of ideas and ideals. Weapons, of course, are necessary. But weapons will only fall into the hands of the Red Army if the people of Europe aren't sold on the idea that we Americans are trying desperately to build up a new order for world peace and that they should help us.

Today it remains an undisputable fact that they are not sold. They are not sold partly because they see the same bankers who loaned the money to build up German steel and munitions plants prior to the war, now proposing to turn German steel and chemical and munitions plants back to the same German cartels which ran them during the war.

They see the same American bankers who loaned Germany billions before the war, now acting as our Secretary of National Defense, as our Undersecretary of the Army and as our Undersecretary of State. And they see them carrying out exactly the same policies in Germany which gave Hitler the chance to convert American loans into a war machine.

All the efforts by the Voice of America and by American newspapers to tell the true story of American idealism will come to naught, Mr. Secretary, as long as this situation prevails.

Consumers First

On the other hand, there is a great opportunity in the Ruhr to build for the peace of Europe. The Ruhr is just as important to the economic welfare of all Europe as it is to Germany. Almost every consumer in Europe has a stake in the Ruhr.

And where consumers have a vital interest we, in the United States, have recognized and protected it. That is why we have utility commissions to regulate electric lights and telephone rates. That is why the Interstate Commerce Commission tells the railroad what it can charge for passengers and freight. The consumers' interest is more important than the vested interest.

Germany has a vested interest in the Ruhr, but the people of western Europe have a consumers' interest, and they have the right to put a commission of small nations in control of the Ruhr to look out for that interest.

In Europe, furthermore, the organizations which have done the best job for the consumer are the big Swedish, Danish, British and Norwegian cooperatives. They are efficient organizations, run by skilled executives who understand European business management, and who are not suspect of building up war plants for the future.

If such men, sitting under the jurisdiction of a commission of small nations, operated Ruhr industry, then it would dispel the fears and suspicions of western Europe. It would cut the ground right out from under Moscow's propaganda. And it would do much to build up confidence on the part of Europe's man in the street—the man who will have to shoulder the gun—that our foreign policy is not dictated by bankers, but by an unselfish desire to build up the future peace of the world.

I apologize for intruding with these thoughts. I do so only because of your own previous eloquence on the necessity of the will to fight, and because a man as busy as you cannot always mingle with the people who in any army must do the bulk of the fighting.

Yours sincerely,
DREW PEARSON.
